'BE JUST—AND STRONG:' ROOSEVELT

IN HIS INAUGURAL SPEECH TO-DAY

TO NATION

President Inaugurated To-day Before Mightiest Throng That Ever Witnessed Such a Ceremony—Grand Parade a Gorgeous Pageant

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Theodore Roosevelt has entered upon his term as the twenty-sixth President of the United States.

With the greatest pageantry and ceremony that has ever characterized any similar occasion he to-day assumed the reins of government for four years.

The President took the oath of office to-day at 1:03 p. m., before tens of thousands at the east front of the Capitol.

Immediately after this he began the delivery of his inaugural address, which occupied exactly twelve minutes. The keynote of it was thankfulness for the power which has been given to the United States.

In his inaugural the President said:

"Toward all other nations, large and small, our attitude must be one of cordial and sincere friendship. We must show not only in our words but in our deeds that we are earnestly desirous of securing their good will by acting toward them in a spirit of just and generous recognition of all their rights. But justice and generosity in a nation, as in an individual, count most when shown not by the weak but by the strong.

In the meantime Vice-President Fairbanks had taken the oath of office. This was administered in the Senate Chamber The Vice-President was one of those present later at the swearing in of President Roosevelt. Mr. Fairbanks's address was very brief.

The conclusion of President Roosevelt's inaugural address was the signal for the greatest demonstration of approval that has ever been seen in Washington.

Following the delivery of this address the President returned to the White House, accompanied by a personal escort. Later from a stand he reviewed the cosmopolitan parade, 30,000 strong, representing every State, Territory and colonial possession of the United States.

This parade was a picturesque and spectacular pageant. With Rough Riders who fought beside the President in Cuba, native Filipinos, militia from many States, and scores of marching clubs, it extended for a great distance.

The large standard floating over the White House was blown from the lanyard by the stiff breeze which blew up shortly after noon. A man climbed the flag staff and replaced the standard before the President returned from the Capitol. Two bamboo staffs in the Court of Honor were blown down, but no one was injured.

Weather conditions were good.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Theodore Roosevelt was to-day inaugurated twenty-sixth President of the United States.

Under the shadow of the gray-domed Capitol, facing the marble features of George Washington, the President took the oath to faithfully execute the laws and to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.

The President began the delivery of his inaugural address at 1:03 o'clock and finished in exactly twelve minutes. He then started back to the White House with his escort.

DEDHAM LAD WINS THE FIRST HEAT IN DASH

GREAT CROWD AT THE SCHOOLBOY GAMES IN MECHANICS BUILDING.

Special to the Boston American.

MECHANICS BUILDING, Boston, March 4.—Mechanics building was fairly alive with schoolboy athletes this afternoon to compete at the annual indoor track championships. Long before the hour of start, the big delegations from the representative schools from all over New England flocked to the immense hall, and in their midst were the stalwart and sturdy athletes who were to represent their respective schools.

Bright colors were in evidence everywhere, and each school section in the hall was gayly decorated.

Just before the schedule hour to start the first heat in the forty-yard dash, the first event on the program, the Rindge Manual Training School Band discoursed martial music from the balcony.

It was a brilliant array of sprinters that answered the call of Clerk of Course Ben-

BOSTON TO BE CENTRE FOR BIG LOBSTER TRUST

The seventeen wholesale lobster dealers in Boston have been approached by an agent of a syndicate seeking to place all large lobster companies in New England under one head. It is believed that the majority of these dealers have given options upon their lobster business or have signed contracts turning over their business to this syndicate. The Boston lobster output amounts annually to 75,000 crates, each containing 100 lobsters.

The dealers are very reticent in the matter of giving out information about the proposed combine or trust. They say that they have been put under oath to maintain silence.

Boston is the centre of the lobster trade, handling practically all the lobsters consumed in the United States. The combine seeks to obtain possession of this trade for one year.

C. F. Simmons, of Simmons, White & Co., of No. 270 Atlantic avenue, said:

"I have not been approached by the agent for the trust as yet. I am of the opinion that A. Booth & Co., of Chicago, are at the head of the movement."

At the office of A. Booth & Co., No. 12 T Wharf, Manager Shaw said:

"As far as I know, this company has not taken part in any such movement and is not in any way connected with it."

ELSIE PORTER WEDS IN PARIS

PARIS, March 4.—Miss Elsie Porter, the daughter of American Ambassador Porter, was married to-day to Dr. Edwin Mende of Zurich at the American Episcopal Church. The civil marriage took place yesterday. The wedding was the occasion for a brilliant gathering of social lights, diplomats and members of the French Government. A reception at the American Embassy followed the wedding. The bride was the recipient of several hundred presents, including a Sevres tea service from the French Government.

Destruction or Capture Faces Kuropatkin

RUSSIANS CRUSHED

CZAR'S ARMY IS CUT IN TWO, AND FALL OF MUKDEN IS EXPECTED SOON.

Kuropatkin's army of nearly half a million Russians has been cut in two. His left wing is isolated. Like great serpents the Japanese armies are coiling around the Russian right and left wings. Annihilation or capture speedily is Kuropatkin's fate, in the opinion of experts.

"Two hundred and sixty thousand Japanese have broken through my left wing," says Kuropatkin's report to St. Petersburg. "It is cut off from the main army. The Japanese are marching on Mukden. My position is extremely dangerous."

Officials in St. Petersburg admit a crushing defeat for their arms. Experts now declare that it will only be a question of hours before the Japanese take Mukden. Retreat of the Russians has apparently been cut off. Their base of supplies at Sinmintin has been captured by the Jap cavalry.

Jachtoolin, a strategical point, has been evacuated by the Russians under a withering fire. Japanese losses run into thousands, however. The little brown men are fighting with a ferocity almost unequalled in history.

Battle Front 100 Miles in Extent.

Only the Russian centre remains solid, and this is being gradually driven back on Mukden. Six times under a hail of shot the Japs charged the Russian centre, seeking to break it, and six times they were driven back with appalling losses. They went to within a couple of hundred yards of the Russians on each charge, then their line wavered, gradually broke and they fell back.

While this great battle rages with a front of 100 miles, the Japanese are also landing men for the siege of Vladivostok, which is expected to begin very soon. Two thousand of the Mikado's troops landed north of Corea, after being conveyed there by warships. A flotilla of torpedo boats covered the landing.

BOY FATALLY INJURED WITH LEAD PENCIL

Drove Rubber End Into Eye and Fractured Skull in Playing.

The most peculiar case which the City Hospital doctors have been called upon to treat for some time appeared to-day when Lester Williamson, four years old, was brought in, suffering from a fractured skull and an injured eye, inflicted with a sharp, rubber-pointed end of a pencil. He is dying from the injuries.

The child is the son of James and Margaret Williamson, who live at No. 12 Sharon street, South End. He bought a penny pencil to-day with a sharp rubber end. When he got home he climbed on to a chair, holding the pencil in his fist, and proceeded to pound holes into a sheet of paper.

He had been doing this for several minutes, and was swinging the pencil back and forth quickly, when the sharp rubber end struck the left eye, penetrated it, and, taking a course in an upward direction, fractured the skull.

The boy fell to the floor, with the pencil sticking in his head. Mrs. Williamson picked him up and rushed to the street with the boy in her arms. A policeman called an ambulance, and the child was hurried to the hospital.

NAN PATTERSON MAY BE FREED

NEW YORK, March 4.—Unless "Nan" Paterson, now in the Tombs charged with the murder of "Caesar" Young, the bookmaker, on June 4 last, is tried during the April term, Supreme Court Judge William J. Gaynor decided to-day to admit her to bail on May 4.

YALE STUDENTS TO COMPETE FOR PRIZES

NEW HAVEN, March 4.—Announcement was made at Yale to-day concerning the John Barrett prizes established by Hon. John Barrett, Minister to Panama. The prizes of $100, $75 and $50 are to be awarded to the authors of the best papers on "The Relations of the United States with the Latin-American republics." The object is to stimulate a closer study of Latin-American history, institutions and conditions.

FAIRBANKS SWORN IN AS VICE-PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Vice-President Fairbanks, after taking the oath of office in the Senate chamber, delivered his inaugural address as follows:

"Senators, I enter upon the discharge of the duties of the position to which I have been called by my countrymen, with grateful appreciation of the high honor and with a deep sense of its responsibilities.

"I have enjoyed the privilege of serving with you here for eight years. During that period we have been engaged in the consideration of many domestic questions of vast importance, and with foreign problems of unusual and far-reaching significance. We submit what we have done to the impartial judgment of history.

"I can never forget the pleasant relations which have been formed during my service upon the floor of the Senate. I shall cherish them always as among the most delightful memories of my life. They warrant the belief that I shall have in the discharge of the functions which devolve upon me under the Constitution the generous assistance and kindly forbearance of both sides of the chamber.

"We witness the majestic spectacle of a peaceful and orderly beginning of an administration of national affairs under the laws of a free and self-governing people. We pray that divine favor may attend it, and that peace and progress, justice and honor may abide with our country and our countrymen."

"POWER MEANS RESPONSIBILITY," SAYS ROOSEVELT.

In Briefest Inaugural on Record Roosevelt Points Out Nation's Duty as Mighty World Power.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The remarkable brevity of President Roosevelt's inaugural address is the subject of comment on every side. Its reading created a profound impression, and many expressions of wonder that so much was said in so few words. The President was repeatedly cheered during its reading.

Here is the inaugural address in full:

"My Fellow Citizens:

"No people on earth have more cause to be thankful than ours, and this is said reverently, in no spirit of boastfulness in our own strength, but with gratitude to the Giver of Good who has blessed us with the conditions which have enabled us to achieve so large a measure of well-being and of happiness. To us as a people it has been granted to lay the foundations of our national life in a new continent. We are the heirs of the ages, and yet we have had to pay few of the penalties which in old countries are exacted by the dead hand of a bygone civilization. We have not been obliged to fight for our existence against any alien race; and yet our life has called for the vigor and effort without which the manlier and hardier virtues wither away. Under such conditions it would be our own fault if we failed; and the success which we have had in the past, the success which we confidently believe the future will bring, should cause in us no feeling of vain-glory, but rather a deep and abiding realization of all which life has offered us; a full acknowledgment of the responsibility which is ours; and a fixed determination to show that under a free government a mighty people can thrive best, alike as regards the things of the body and the things of the soul.

The Peace of Justice and Righteousness.

"Much has been given to us, and much will rightfully be expected from us. We have duties to others and duties to ourselves; and we can shirk neither. We have become a great nation, forced by the fact of its greatness into relations with the other nations of the earth; and we must behave as beseems a people with such responsibilities. Toward all other nations, large and small, our attitude must be one of cordial and sincere friendship. We must show not only in our words but in our deeds that we are earnestly desirous of securing their good will by acting toward them in a spirit of just and generous recognition of all their rights. But justice and generosity in a nation, as in an individual, count most when shown not by the weak but by the strong. While ever careful to refrain from wronging others, we must be no less insistent that we are not wronged ourselves. We wish peace; but we wish the peace of justice, the peace of righteousness. We wish it because we think it is right and not because we are afraid. No weak nation that acts manfully and justly should ever have cause to fear us, and no strong power should ever be able to single us out as a subject for insolent aggression.

"Our relations with the other powers of the world are important; but still more important are our relations among ourselves. Such growth in wealth, in population, and in power as this nation has seen during the century and a quarter of its national life is inevitably accompanied by a like growth in the problems which are ever before every nation that rises to greatness.

Great Perils Due to Industrial Conditions.

"Power invariably means both responsibility and danger. Our forefathers faced certain perils which we have outgrown. We now face other perils the very existence of which it was impossible that they should foresee. Modern life is both complex and intense, and the tremendous changes wrought by the extraordinary industrial development of the last half century are felt in every fibre of our social and political being. Never before have men tried so vast and formidable an experiment as that of administering the affairs of a continent under the forms of a democratic republic. The conditions which have told for our marvelous material well-being, which have developed to a very high degree our energy, self-reliance, and individual initiative, have also brought the care and anxiety inseparable from the accumulation of great wealth in industrial centres. Upon the success of our experiment much depends; not only as regards our own welfare, but as regards the welfare of mankind. If we fail, the cause of free government throughout the world will rock to its foundations; and therefore our responsibility is heavy, to ourselves, to the world as it is to-day, and to the generations yet unborn. There is no good reason why we should fear the future, but there is every reason why we should face it seriously, neither hiding from ourselves the gravity of the problems before us nor fearing to approach these problems with the unbending, unflinching purpose to solve them aright.

Power of Devotion to a Lofty Ideal.

"Yet, after all, though the problems are new, though the tasks set before us differ from the tasks set before our fathers who founded and preserved this republic, the spirit in which these tasks must be undertaken and these problems faced, if our duty is to be well done, remains essentially unchanged. We know that self-government is difficult. We know that no people needs such high traits of character as that people which seeks to govern its affairs aright through the freely expressed will of the freemen who compose it. But we have faith that we shall not prove false to the memories of the men of the mighty past. They did their work, they left us the splendid heritage we now enjoy. We in our turn have an assured confidence that we shall be able to leave this heritage unwasted and enlarged to our children and our children's children. To do so we must show, not merely in great crises, but in the every-day affairs of life, the qualities of practical intelligence, of courage, of hardihood and endurance, and above all the power of devotion to a lofty ideal, which made great the men who founded this republic in the days of Washington, which made great the men who preserved this republic in the days of Abraham Lincoln."

Chaplain Hale's Prayer for President and People

ALMIGHTY GOD, this nation is in thy care, and this people seeks thee to-day. We are in prayer for the country that it may be more and more the happy nation which seeks thee and finds thee as they find thee who seek for thee with all their hearts.

Thou hast made this people master of its own destiny. This people has chosen its leaders and its leaders and its Congress for these years before them, and they ask and we ask thy consecration in these years—for every father and mother, for every son and daughter, for every home—the help and blessing of the living God.

For the President, for the Vice-President, for the Congress, for judges and for the people we ask the blessing every hour of the living God.

For purity in their homes, for peace, for health, for strength—for all that God can give, for all that men can use in the service which is perfect freedom.—Prayer of Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale in the Senate to-day.

PAGEANT CARRIED OUT WITHOUT HITCH

The ceremony by which the old President was transformed into the new was very impressive. Probably there were 100,000 people in sight of the President as he took the oath and pressed his lips to the open page of the Bible.

Then the boom of a ten-inch gun shook the atmosphere. It was the first shot of the twenty-one in honor of the newly inaugurated Chief Executive. But louder than the roaring cannon rose the voice of the people in cheers for Theodore Roosevelt—not as a member of a political party that was victorious at the last election, but for Theodore Roosevelt, President of all the people of our country.

Typical of the warm heart and broad mind of the citizens of America was the great event. Party feeling was drowned in a great wave of patriotism, such as always swells up at a momentous moment in our country's history.

Mingling their cheers with those who had helped to elect Theodore Roosevelt were those who had voted against him. In the glittering pageant that swung along the broad thoroughfares were Republicans and Democrats shoulder to shoulder as they marched and fought at San Juan Hill.

MIGHTY WAVE OF CHEERS.

It was an occasion that no participant or beholder will ever forget—an event characteristically American.

When the President emerged from the White House to-day he found an escort awaiting him that must have caused his heart to glow. There were his beloved Rough Riders, thirty of them, under General Brodie. With them in shining panoply was the crack Squadron A of the New York National Guard.

As the President entered the carriage, drawn by four bay horses, he was greeted with a cheer from the Rough Riders, the members of Troop A and the great crowd down on the avenue. Senators Spooner and Lodge and Representative Dalzell climbed into the carriage with the President. They proceeded to the west gate of the grounds and then turned eastward to make the slow journey to the Capitol through wildly cheering banks of people.

"GOOD LUCK," CRIES ROOSEVELT.

"Good luck to you, boys," cried the President, as he left the White House to the knot of newspaper men and photographers standing with bared heads.

"Good luck to you, Mr. President," replied the small gathering.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Alice, Miss Hagner, the White House social secretary, and several ladies of the Cabinet circle stood out upon the eastern terrace to see the President and his official family leave the grounds.

Senator Fairbanks's carriage immediately followed the President's equipage. With Senator Fairbanks were Senator Bacon and Representatives Crumpacker and John Sharp Williams. The Cabinet members in carriages followed behind the Vice-President-elect, and then came carriages containing General Wilson, the chairman of the inauguration committee; the President's military and naval aides and Secretary Loeb.

As soon as the President's carriage emerged from the grounds the Rough Riders escort, which had been waiting at the west gate, closed in behind and around the vehicle. Troop A of New York, which had been stationed in front of the east gate and the Treasury building, preceded the entire cavalcade, and the Grand Army of the Republic closed up the gap behind the gaily uniformed cavalrymen.

CARRIAGE CLOSELY GUARDED.

A slight break in the formation of the parade occurred just ahead of the President's carriage on Pennsylvania avenue. The President asserted himself vigorously. Several sharp commands to the men of the escort caused the mix-up to be straightened out and the carriage moved on its way.

Even greater precautions than usual in such events were taken for the President's safety. His carriage was flanked by secret service men, who walked on foot. Others followed on either side of the line. No one was permitted to cross the street.

As the President and his escort made their way toward the Capitol the crowd increased in size and at several points there was a great crush of humanity. The grounds about the Capitol when the President's party arrived at 10:50 o'clock were occupied at every available spot.

Upon the arrival of the President at the Capitol he was conducted to the President's room in the rear of the Senate chamber, where he began at once the signing of belated bills.

It was 12:07 when Senator Fairbanks entered the Senate chamber. He was followed three minutes later by the President. The new Vice-President was sworn in at 12:13 and two minutes later the body adjourned sine die. Mr. Fairbanks then delivered his inaugural address.

CHORUS OF 600 VOICES.

Eight acres of humanity spread fan-shaped from the focus made by a little covered shelter, open at the sides, where the President was to stand. Over toward the imposing facade of the Congressional Library it extended, literally a "sea of faces." There may have been only 50,000; probably there were nearer 100,000 in sight of the President when he took the oath.

Stands on the central portico, extending to the tribune wherein the ceremony occurred, covered an acre. From the central entrance of the Capitol to the seats of honor surrounding the pagoda-like tribune was laid a carpet of crimson plush. Long before the ceremonies in the Senate, where Vice-President Fairbanks was taking his oath of office, were concluded most of the reserved seats had been filled by ticket holders. A chorus of 600 voices was installed to the left of the stand, the leader, Percy S. Foster, of Washington, standing high above them.

The imposing form of Associate Justice John Marshall Harlan, who is almost heroic in stature, was the first to catch the eye of the vast crowd. Flanked by the Marshal of the Supreme Court and the Marshal of the District of Columbia, Justice Harlan led his colleagues, garbed in flowing robes of black, topped with satin skull caps, to their seats at the left of the tribune. After a brief pause, Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador and dean of the Diplomatic Corps, marshaled forth the Ambassadors and Ministers of foreign countries.

CHEER FOR FAIRBANKS.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Fairbanks were next escorted to seats just outside the tribune. The President's children were with Mrs. Roosevelt, and Mr. Fairbanks's two sons, students at Yale, and his daughter, Mrs. Adelaide Timmons, were with Mrs. Fairbanks. Mrs. Roosevelt was gowned in a severely plain tailored suit of electric blue, the round skirt was trimmed in bands of lighter shade panne velvet, and the short, modish jacket had a vest of the panne braided in silver. Mrs. Fairbanks wore a beautiful dress of brown velvet, trimmed with chiffon and white ermine. Her hat and gloves were also white.

Vice-President Fairbanks, accompanied by the Secretary of the Senate and followed by the Senators and ex-Senators, was next in order. Then came Speaker Cannon and the House of Representatives. The instant the tall form of the Vice-President appeared a swelling cheer burst from the crowd. Mr. Fairbanks bowed repeatedly before taking his chair. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, advancing down the carpet in a businesslike manner, was quickly recognized and evoked salvos of applause.

Secretary Hay and the other members of the Cabinet were ushered to their chairs, and at their heels came Admiral Dewey and Lieutenant-General Chaffee.

PRESSED LIPS TO BIBLE.

President Roosevelt advanced from the door of the Capitol, arm in arm with Chief Justice Fuller. Instantly, from all parts of the eight acres of humanity, arose a prolonged, tumultuous shout. At a distance it might have been mistaken for a chorus of colossal fog-horns; close by it filled and deafened the ears.

Behind the President and his white-haired companion came James H. McKenney, Clerk of the Supreme Court, bearing a ponderous Bible. When the demonstration ceased, Chief Justice Fuller, his snowy locks falling to his shoulders, in feeble tones pronounced the oath.

President Roosevelt's voice was easily audible at some distance when he repeated the formal declaration prescribed in Article II. of the Constitution:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

A second later he bowed and pressed his lips upon the open pages of Holy Writ. Again erect, he faced the people, and for an instant perfect silence held. A signal had been flashed from the dome of the Capitol to the navy yard, whence came the boom of a ten-inch gun, first of twenty-one, fired in honor of the newly inaugurated Chief Executive.

The tension was broken, and a roar of cheers resounded far and wide across the plaza. In fruitless competition there was heard by a few the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" from Professor Foster's big chorus. On the outskirts of the crowd bands were playing; cannon in the Virginia forts across the river and batteries in the city were joining the big guns of the monitor "Puritan" in the salute to the President. For many minutes the jangle of sounds continued before the President could find a chance to begin his inaugural address.

BACK TO THE ROTUNDA.

The conclusion of the address was the signal for another ovation, during which Mr. Roosevelt shook hands with most of the notables who pressed about the tribune. Then he was escorted back to the rotunda of the Capitol and thence to the executive chamber, where he held a brief reception before leaving for the White House.

In the meantime Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, had become Vice President of the United States. He reached the north side of the Capitol a few minutes after 11 o'clock and went to the Vice President's room, which he will occupy for the coming four years as presiding officer of the Senate. President Roosevelt had arrived a little before, and was in his own room receiving the leaders of the Senate and House between scratches of his pen as he signed bills passed during the expiring hours of the Fifty-eighth Congress.

At noon Senator Frye, President pro tem, hammered the marble desk, and announced in set formula that the Senate of the Fifty-eighth Congress was adjourned sine die; then he immediately called the extraordinary session of the Senate of the Fifty-ninth Congress to order.

PRAYER BY DR. HALE.

Mr. Fairbanks was forthwith ushered into the chamber, the Senate members of the inaugural committee acting as his escort. He proceeded to the rostrum, where Senator Frye administered the usual oath. The new Vice-President's first official act was to call upon the Senate's chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, to pray.

Mr. Fairbanks then delivered his inaugural address, and, at its conclusion, he instructed the Secretary to read the President's proclamation convening the extraordinary session of the Senate. Next the new Senators were called to the Secretary's desk and took the oath. This somewhat tedious business finished, the Vice President announced:

"The sergeant-at-arms will execute the order for the inauguration ceremonies."

President Roosevelt was then escorted back to the executive chamber, adjoining the marble room, preparatory to going to the east portico, himself to take the oath of office. The other distinguished visitors filed out of the chamber in the order of official precedence, and went to the seats assigned them for the Presidential ceremony.

200,000 VISITORS.

The inaugural ceremonies over, all eyes turned to the big parade. With standards waving, gudions whipping in the breeze and regimental colors flaunting, infantry, cavalry and artillery tramped, pranced and rumbled through historic Pennsylvania avenue.

The somewhat mediocre buildings, which for the most part line this broadest thoroughfare in the country, were hidden by tri-colored bunting that fluttered and billowed from roof to pavement, all the way from the Peace Monument to Seventeenth street. Sidewalks were jammed. Every window on the avenue, many rented for the day at prices ranging from $10 to $100 apiece, framed eager faces. Balconies held perilously crowded parties, and from end to end of the route of march the roofs competed with the pavements in accommodating men and women willing to risk a fatal misstep to watch the passing legions.

There are 200,000 visitors in Washington to-day. With the resident population, the parade was seen by nearly half a million people.

BEAT ALL RECORDS.

Experienced observers say that the procession beats all its predecessors, even that of McKinley's second inauguration. Not since the review of the Federal Army after the Civil War has the avenue seen so many and such variety of soldiers. The military led, then came the civic organizations as a sort of afterthought—not that their appearance wasn't spectacular and as interesting as in former years, but somehow plug hats and frock coats did not evoke the enthusiasm roused by gold lace and brass buttons.

There were between 33,000 and 35,000 men in line. For three hours the mobilization progressed along First street, Pennsylvania avenue and conduent streets about the Capitol. Many of the militia companies and civic bodies arrived on morning trains; some that should have arrived yesterday afternoon and evening were so delayed on account of congested traffic that they were not detrained in the railroad yards until the wee hours of to-day.

Lieutenant-General Chaffee, grand marshal of the parade, had the method of alignment planned to the last notch, and the local militia officers, with District of Columbia guardsmen and a number of regular officers and enlisted men, acted as a well-organized force of aids in the preliminary troubles of gathering the forces about the Capitol grounds.

In honor of the great occasion the city was in gala attire. Everywhere decorations met the eye. Grandstands were covered with bunting; buildings were streamers of red, white and blue; American flags graced every available staff. The centre of attraction was at the White House, where the parade review took place.

In Lafayette square the largest stand in the city was erected. It accommodated 5,000 reserved seat holders, who had paid from three to five dollars each for admission. Across the avenue was the presidential stand, seating 1,200 persons, the most ornamental in town. Doric columns supported the roof, the classic scheme being accentuated in the middle section, from which President Roosevelt, the Inaugural Committee and a chosen few, consisting of Cabinet members, their families and guests, participated in the review.

The committee on decoration of Pennsylvania avenue, during the week which the merchants devoted to getting their buildings dressed for to-day, exercised a general supervision, and a settled scheme was very generally followed. Hardly a building was without its full swathing of streamers from roof to pavement, and the general effect was entirely harmonious.

The decorations on each building were marked by two lines. The lower line, following the tops of the windows on the lower floors, was mostly decorated with blue bunting, relieved with white, and the upper line, at approximately thirty-five feet from the ground, was in festoons of bunting, white predominating, with red as the relieving color. Privately constructed stands were required to be decorated according to this scheme, so that up and down the avenue they held the plan together.

Historical buildings and localities throughout the city were marked with large signs, so that the thousands of visitors touring the city might be apprised of the significance of the places they were seeing.

PENSION BUILDING AN ITALIAN GARDEN

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Never before has the Pension Building presented so beautiful a scene as that on which the newly inaugurated President will gaze as he enters his panoplied box to-night to open the inaugural ball. He will find himself in an Italian garden, surrounded by a two-storied arcade hung with festoons of laurel and southern smilax and baskets of gayly colored orchids and pink azaleas.

Flowers bloom everywhere, and stately palms from the tropics stand here and there amid the golden columns of the arcade, with its ivory facades.

Crowning the gallery of the second arcade are seventy-six columns, supporting as many globes, on each of which stands an American eagle with outstretched wings.

Festoons of ivory-colored drapery connect the columns, and back of each rises a fir tree, the tops almost lost to view in the dim blue of the sky.

In the centre of the garden is a wonderful grotto with weird caves. A seven-mouthed fountain shoots forth streams of many colors, which splash upon the rocks and freshen the drooping water lilies that bloom among the ferns.

At the other end of this wonderful garden, back of a bank of blue bougainsvilles, is a small amphitheatre almost surrounded by huge ferns. These flowers and plants conceal the Marine band from view.

This is what has been done with the Pension building, where every inaugural ball since President Cleveland's inauguration has been held. For months the decoration committee has been working, and the result of their labors will be seen to-night.

Never before have the decorations been on such a bold and lavish scale. Instead of swaddling the immense court of the Pension building with bunting and flowers and palms, the committee undertook to improvise an Italian garden. The walls are covered with blue bunting, and in order to gain the effect of a sky overhead the lights are centred and confined almost entirely to the garden.

Green and gold are the predominating tones in the decorations. The second story of the ivory tinted arcade has a luminous red frieze, which stands in striking relief against the blue background of the rest of the building. Other contrasts are furnished by the evergreens that surround the summit of the arcade.

Largely to the accurate detail with which the illuminating scheme has been worked out is due the harmony with which the flowers and the palms, the bunting and the flags, the trees, and the golden columns of the arcade are blended with the dim blue overhead.

THOUSANDS OF LIGHTS.

In order to give the greatest illumination to the ball room floor, a double row of strong lights with reflecting glass globes are arranged at the first cornice level of the arcade.

Surrounding the second story of the arcades is a series of discs between the arches. Each disc consists of seventy-six frosted lights of soft tones in colors. Lighting up the second story of the arcade is a line of similar lights along the cornice level.

To illuminate the decorations and the fir trees without bringing the ceiling into prominence, a series of dim lights have been arranged at the base of each column. Abandoning the incandescent lights used at the last inaugural ball, the committee have only used frosted and faintly tinted bulbs throughout the decorative scheme.

The lighting and the draperies, as far as possible, are independent of the flowers.

FIR TREES FROM BAY STATE.

The flowers, both in number and rarity, exceed the floral decorations ever used at an inaugural ball. Four carloads of evergreens were brought here from Alabama and 1,000 palm leaves from Porto Rico. Five thousand yards of laurel roping and 500 wreaths have been used in decorating the arcade.

The hundreds of bougainvillea plants which stand in front of the band stand were brought from the Philippines, and 500 fir trees were brought from Massachusetts. In the garden and around the President's box are blooming 5,000 roses and 500 azalea plants in full bloom.

Rising fifty-two feet from the floor back of the bandstand is a nimbus of electric lights in the shape of a shell and banked on either side by palms. Within this nimbus are thirteen orange medallions, representing the thirteen original States. Each medallion is set with a blue and white five-pointed star. These medallions are set in a network of gold cable which is studded at the intersection of the mesh with gold lamps. Above the nimbus is a trophy of six American flags and an eagle.

PRESIDENT'S BOX IN RED.

At the opposite end of the ballroom in the first gallery is the President's box, overlooking the entire hall. The box is draped in rich, red curtains, and enormous draped with rich, red curtains, and enormous American Beauty roses predominate in the decoration. The box is lined with ivory bunting.

In the arrangement of this box the efforts has been to bring the President to the front as prominently as possible. Immediately over the box hangs the President's flag, and over this are trophy flags. Huge royal palms, with leaves twenty-five feet in length, rise from the floor on either side of the box. These were imported from Porto Rico.

The President's room is lavishly decorated with American Beauty roses, orchids and asparagus fern.

ELECTRICITY ADDS SPLENDOR TO SCENE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The most striking feature of the arrangements for the inauguration of President Roosevelt is the electrical illumination. This form of night decoration has never been undertaken before on an extensive scale in Washington for any of the many ceremonial events.

For this inauguration, however, the committee has decided upon a departure which has resulted in a very effective illumination of almost the entire route of the parade.

The cornice of the Treasury Building is studded with closely placed electric lights. The tower of the postoffice building, one of the most imposing in the city, is outlined with electric bulbs. The same is true of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

BUILDINGS OUTLINED.

The illuminations in front of the White House are very elaborate and effective. The State, War and Navy buildings and other public structures have been outlined with electric lights. The result is an illumination of Pennsylvania avenue, New York avenue and other of the principal thoroughfares.

The court of history, which leads to the way in front of the President's reviewing stand, is also illuminated by thousands upon thousands of electric lights. In front of the White House is the President's reviewing stand; on the opposite side of the avenue is another reviewing stand, for distinguished men and women who come to attend the inauguration. The columns supporting the roofs of these structures, the cornices, the arcs are all outlined with closely set electric lights. To the east, the sides of the avenue are lined with statues and staff from the St. Louis Exposition.

POLES FROM PHILIPPINES.

This court of history is also embellished by tall standards, made of three bamboo poles each, from the Philippines. These are festooned with electric lights. To the south of this court is the north front of the Treasury and the largest grand stand in the city, which is illuminated in the same artistic and attractive fashion.

Across the avenue is the grand stand which last inauguration was erected by Chairman Hanna for his political lieutenants and their families.

This year it is a public grand stand, but it is gotten up in artistic style, and to-night is a solid blaze of electric lights.

Another feature of this court is the solid granite buildings, imposing and beautiful, of the Riggs Bank and American Security and Trust Company, which is commonly called the "Standard Oil treasury." The beautiful light pink granite fronts are almost hidden from view by solid walls of bunting, trimmed with dazzling dozens of electric lights.

14 GOVERNORS AT RECEPTION GIVEN BY SEN. FAIRBANKS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Governors of fourteen States, with their staffs, are here in attendance upon the inaugural ceremonies. Last night they were given a reception by Senator Fairbanks at his beautiful home on Connecticut avenue.

The President held receptions all day yesterday, when he could find time from official business.

He spent a few minutes with his secretaries looking over the documents requiring his signature received from Congress, and after disposing of these went to the reception room to shake hands with those who had traveled a long distance to pay their respects.

After chatting with these for a short time he would return to his private office and sign some more bills. When those on his desk were out of the way he returned to the reception room to linger with his friends for a time. In this manner he spent several hours to-day.

Among those who called upon him were President Mellen, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and T. E. Byrnes, of Boston, his assistant. The President said to all that he was never in better health and spirits in his life.

How Uncle Sam has grown in 129 years. The marvelous progress that has been made since the day of Washington is graphically illustrated in a double-page feature in to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

PRESIDENT TAKES OATH ON BIBLE HE USED AS GOVERNOR

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Bible used to-day by President Roosevelt in taking the oath of office will be the one which he kissed when he was inaugurated Governor of New York, January 2, 1899. It will be held by Chief Clerk James H. McKenney of the Supreme Court.

President Roosevelt has suggested no particular passage of the Scriptures at which he desires the book to be opened, and Clerk McKenney will, therefore, open the Bible at random. This, he says, has been the practice throughout the twenty years he has officiated at such functions.

"This talk of selected passages for the presidential oath is nonsense," he said. "The only certainty is that the passage will be somewhere near the middle of the Bible. I remember there was no question as to what passage of the Bible was opened when President Harrison took the oath; a driving rain fell and the pages were blistered by the big rain drops.

"President Cleveland decided to take the oath on a little, red-bound Bible his mother had given him when he first left home in his boyhood. I had provided a big Bible, but he said he wanted the little one used. On the occasion of his second oath he used the same little Bible.

"If I had my way, I would use to-day a little Bible we have in the Supreme Court. It has been in use since 1808, and every Associate Justice and Chief Justice has used it in taking the oath since that time, with the exception of Chief Justice Chase, who had a Bible of his own. Every lawyer sworn in as a member of the Supreme Court Bar has touched the same book. When it performs 100 years' service I am going to have it put under a glass cover and buy a new one for the next century."

TWO VIRGINIA MEN AT INAUGURATION OVERCOME BY GAS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The first untoward incident of the inauguration was the finding of two visitors overcome by gas in a boarding house on East Capitol street. They were G. W. Moses of Level Run, Va., and W. D. Akins of Chatham, Va.

Both men were removed to the casualty hospital, where it was stated that their cases were precarious.

A rich New York society woman is founding a hospital for homeless cats and dogs. Her institution is the subject of an illustrated page feature in to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

MEMBERS OF HOUSE TO GIVE CANNON BIG SILVER LOVING CUP

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A mammoth silver loving cup, purchased with contributions from every member of the House, regardless of party, is presented to-day to Speaker Cannon in testimony of their esteem, affection and confidence.

It is planned to have the House take a recess for fifteen minutes, during which Mr. Cannon will be taken from the chamber by one of his friends. The cup then will be brought in and placed on the clerk's desk. Representative Hepburn, of Iowa, and Representative Hay, of Virginia, Chairmen respectively of the Republican and Democratic House caucuses, will be installed as joint presiding officers of the House in the Speaker's rostrum. Mr. Cannon will be escorted into the chamber, and Representative Boutell, of Chicago, will make the presentation.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—To-day among the thousands gathered here for the inauguration of Theodore Roosevelt as President of the United States, there were no more conspicuous groups than those which represent the New England States.

Nearly every one of the hotels has its New England contingent. In the hotel corridors there are to be seen the uniforms of the staffs of every Governor from New England, with the exception of Massachusetts. The gorgeousness of the equipment brought on from New England has astonished even Washington.

There is a reckless exhibition of gold lace. Generals and colonels and even lesser officers have come in full regalia, and the uniforms are worn everywhere.

Governor McLane of New Hampshire, Governor Bell of Vermont and Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff of Connecticut, each is accompanied by nearly a complete staff. Governor Cobb of Maine came with only three of his staff.

Attend Reception.

Among those from New Hampshire who attended the reception were: General and Mrs. A. D. Ayling, General and Mrs. D. C. Remich, General and Mrs. Ernest Bell, General and Mrs. Frank E. Kaley, General and Mrs. William F. Thayer, Colonel Frederick Shepard, Colonel C. J. Woodward, Colonel and Mrs. William P Straw, Colonel and Mrs. A. Melvin Foss, Colonel and Mrs. J. H. Bartlett, Colonel and Mrs. Edwin C. Bean, Hon. and Mrs. Charles M. Floyd, Hon. J. Woodburg Howard, Hon. E. C. Leach, Hon. C. H. Greenleaf, Miss Mabel Walker, Hon. and Mrs. A. C. Kennet, Miss Hazel McLane, Miss Margaret Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cilly, C. A. McLane, Mr. Parkstraw and George H. Moses. The New Hampshire party is quartered at the New Willard.

Governor Cobb, of Maine, is having as quiet a time as any Governor. He is accompanied by Mrs. Cobb and his two young daughters and Brigadier-General Charles E. Davis, Lieutenant-Colonel Robert H. Crockett and Major Edward Kelley, of his staff. Former Governor John F. Hill is a guest of Senator Hale, of Maine, but has spent much of his time with the Maine delegation.

Governor Cobb Dined.

Governor and Mrs. Cobb have been much feted since their arrival. Congressman and Mrs. Burleigh gave a dinner in their honor. Senator and Mrs. Hale entertained them at dinner also, and the party watched the closing hours of the Senate as guests of Senator Hale.

General Davis and Major Kelley have been designated as aides on the staff of Lieutenant-General Chaffee, Grand Marshal of the Inaugural parade. There are four former Governors of Maine at present in the capital. Congressmen Burleigh and Powers served in that capacity as predecessors of Governor Hill, and Sidney Perham, who was Governor from 1871 to 1874, has joined the party. Mrs. Byron Boyd, wife of the Maine Secretary of State, has joined Governor Cobb's party.

Rhode Island Party.

Governor Utter, of Rhode Island, has a distinguished party from his State in quarters at the Arlington. In the party are: Lieutenant-Governor Frederick H. Jackson, Adjutant-General Frederick M. Sackett, Speaker Joseph J. Burlingame, Richard W. Jennings, Frank E. Holden, Nathan W. Wright, Secretary of State Charles P. B. Bennett, State Treasurer Walter A. Reed, Attorney-General William F. Greenough, Major Charles W. Abbott, Jr., Quartermaster-General Howard Walker, Colonel Webster Knight, General Walter R. Stiness, Colonel John H. Wetherell, Colonel Zenas W. Bliss, Colonel George H. Webb, General George H. Kenyon, Colonel Everett E. Whipple, General Herbert S. Tanner, Colonel Arthur V. Warfield, Colonel J. Henry Manning, Colonel Harold A. Peckham and James Read.

Governor Charles J. Bell and the Misses Bell have received the attentions of the Vermont Congressional delegates since their arrival at the Riggs House. They are accompanied by members of Governor Bell's staff and ladies, and their quarters have been much sought, not only by the Congressional party, but by Washington Vermonters generally.

Accompanying the Governor and his family are: Generals Gilmore, Putnam and Williams, the Misses Williams, Colonel Billings, Mr. Dawson, Colonel and Mrs. Wells, Colonel and Mrs. Dole, Colonel and Mrs. Schaiff, Colonel and Mrs. Walters, Major Dyer, Captain Kettleson, D. H. Perry and R. H. Galusha and wife.

Salemites Meet Roosevelt.

They were entertained at the Capitol by members of the Vermont Congressional delegation and were given an opportunity to witness the Senate close its deliberations. The party has been given an exceptional opportunity for reviewing the parade.

Naturally the Capitol was visited by nearly all the members of the New England delegations during the closing hours. They found people on hand to welcome them and were given some of the best seats in the gallery of both the Senate and the House.

Senators Lodge and Crane were kept busy during the last hours receiving delegations of Massachusetts people outside of the regular party. Mayor Joseph N. Peterson, of Salem, headed a crowd which called upon Senator Crane. They expressed a wish to see the President.

Senator Crane found that it was possible for them to meet Mr. Roosevelt and took them over to the executive department. They were all introduced, including Thomas Brophy, of Gloucester, a member of the Democratic State Committee.

"Mr. President, I bring you the congratulations of the Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts," said Brophy.

"Delighted," exclaimed the President, who forgot himself in the surprise of such congratulations. He added quickly: "I never knew a Democrat yet, who wasn't an American." Brophy says he will explain everything to Captain Flaherty when he returns to Boston.

In Mayor Peterson's crowd were President Michael Doyle, of the Board of Aldermen of Salem, Councilman Gifford, former Alderman Hussey, County Commissioners Bates and Sawyer, E. P. Shaw, Mrs. Shaw and their daughters, Councillor and Mrs. Slade of Fall River, Attorney Maxwell of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; Colonel Thomas Tafft, Jeremiah McCarthy, surveyor of the port of Boston; Mrs. William P. Littlefield, of Lynn, and Mrs. Robinson, of Brookline.

Hon. Isaac B. F. Allen, Boston's colored ex-councillor, showed up at Senator Crane's rooms and told a hard-luck story. He had lost his watch and grip. He had, however, 40 cents left, and thought he could get along until he heard from the reserve fund in Boston.

"I am still on hand, Senator," he told Senator Crane. "Sometimes I have been used badly, but you always know where to find Ike Allen."

In the course of his wanderings the Hon. Mr. Allen visited the entire Massachusetts delegation, with the exception of Senator Lodge. The latter arrived at the Capitol late and missed the call made by Boston's colored Republican leader.

Colonel E. W. Doherty, of Marblehead, who is Senator Crane's messenger, piloted a number of his old associates about the Capitol grounds. There was not an arrival from the North Shore but what found Colonel Doherty. The Massachusetts delegation was informed that Secretary Shaw had issued orders transferring T. H. O'Neil from Washington to his former position in the sub-treasury in Boston.

Harvard Men Lively.

Having a merry time at the "Cecil," on Fifteenth street, and at their headquarters, No. 1,133 Fourteenth street, are the members of the Harvard Republican Club, who march in cap and gown in the inaugural parade. They are headed by Henry M. Wheeler, president of the club, and Weston Brook Flint, who has charge of the headquarters. Dr. and Mrs. Flint have also taken quarters at the "Cecil," and are keeping watch over the welfare of the youngsters. Alfred E. Lient, president of the American Republican College League Club, and Ellore G. Cushman were among the early arrivals. The "Cecil" has been a lively place ever since the Harvard delegation arrived.

Quartered in the armory of the National Rifles, the members of the Massachusetts militia companies are camping out. They have the entire armory turned over to them. Major Dyar, who is in command, has been a busy man looking after them ever since the contingent arrived.

Malden's Mayor Camps Out.

The crowd had welcome visitors who are sharing their blankets and cots. Mayor Hastings and Alderman Strout, of Malden, joined the members of Company L of the Fifth.

"Where are you going to put up, Mr. Mayor?" one of the company asked the chief executive of Malden.

"With whoever will share with me his blanket and his floor corner," responded Mayor Hastings. He was unable to secure accommodations at a hotel, and informed his company that he was more than glad if they could take him in. They did, and he proved as good a campaigner as the best.

Dr. George E. Keeler, Captain Mark E. Smith and Lieutenant Wilson, of Company A, Fifth Regiment, were also among the dwellers in the regimental quarters. Captain Northrup and Lieutenant Cook of Attleboro, were received with shouts when they joined the crew from the jewelry town. Among others the camp has received visits from Major Stover and Major Meredith, of the [illegible] Major Gillespie, of the Fusilier. Nearly all the officers made a tour of Mount Vernon during the afternoon, visiting all points of interest.

Captain Lombard, of Cambridge, Battery B, will act as Adjutant of the Massachusetts brigade in the parade. The brigade is composed of the following: Company L, Fifth Infantry, sixty-five men, of Malden, Captain Cutting, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Battery F, sixty men, of Taunton, N. O. Danforth commanding, quartered at the Pythian Temple; Battery H, forty men, of Chelsea, W. L. Pratt commanding, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Battery B, of Cambridge, fifty-five men, W. E. Lombard commanding, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Company I, Fifth Infantry, of Attleboro, Captain Northrup, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Battery A, fifty men, of Boston, Captain Smythe, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Battery E, of New Bedford, fifty-eight men, J. L. Gibbs commanding, quartered at National Rifles Armory; Troop D, Boston, twenty men, Sergeant Goozins commanding, at National Rifles Armory; Battery G, of Boston, fifty men, Captain Chick, at National Rifles Armory; Company A, Sixth Infantry, of Wakefield, forty-five men, Captain McMahon, at National Rifles Armory; Company C, Sixth Infantry, forty-five men, of Lowell, Captain Kittredge, quartered at the Virginian; First Regimental Band, of Boston, and the Massachusetts Field Band, under direction of Bandmaster W. H. Hunt.

Two Massachusetts girls led the cheering of the delegation of the National Cathedral School for Girls of Georgetown, which has been assigned to one of the sections of the grand stand directly opposite the President's reviewing stand. They are Miss Mary Bridge, daughter of Robert C. Bridge of Marblehead, and Miss Perkins of Waltham. The young women are enthusiasts in the matter of cheering, and Miss Bridge and Miss Perkins have drilled them in excellent shape.

Miss M. E. Reeser and Miss Taylor of Springfield are among the visitors who have received much attention. Miss Reeser is a guest of Mrs. M. J. Hull, at the Iowa, and Miss Taylor is with Mrs. S. F. S. Johnson, at the Woodley.

COUNTRY SATISFIED, SAYS SENATOR LODGE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was asked by the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day what the inauguration of President Roosevelt meant to the country. The Senator threw out his arms in a wide, expressive gesture.

"It means much," he said. "Recently I wrote a magazine article in which I endeavored to tell just what it did mean. It took 3,000 words to tell it.

"You might say that everybody is abundantly satisfied with what takes place to-day. I know that I am satisfied. The crowds which have gathered here show that there is satisfaction everywhere."

WONDROUS GOWNS TO BE WORN AT BALL IN PENSION BUILDING

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Marvelious creations of the dressmaker's art will be seen in the procession when the great inaugural ball in the Pension building is formally opened to-night by President Roosevelt.

Leading the procession will be ten special aides. Next will come the chairman and vice-chairman of the Floor Committee and then President and Mrs. Roosevelt. They will be followed by Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks.

Perhaps no gown worn at the ball will attract as much attention as Mrs. Roosevelt's. It is of brocade silk of electric blue, woven in Paterson, N. J., and trimmed with chiffon of the same shade. The brocade is woven in a pattern of golden feathers in medallions, on a soft blue ground, in which appear to flit the figures of birds with outspread wings. The bodice and skirt—in defiance of a princess-make season—are cut separate. The bodice is made in the Louis XV. fashion, with a low, square-cut neck with a shirred tucker of chiffon and a long, pointed stomacher.

The only trimming is a little rare old point lace, an heirloom in Mrs. Roosevelt's family, across the shoulders. The sleeves consist of a very small drapery of chiffon across the upper part of the arms. The skirt has a wide, circular sweep and a short train, measuring just seventy-eight inches from the back of the girdle at the waist line to the hem. It contains about thirty yards of brocade and is made absolutely without visible decoration.

MISS ALICE IN WHITE.

The gown to be worn by Miss Roosevelt is of white chiffon satin, finely hand embroidered, with a train about a yard and a half long.

The waist has a low, square-cut bodice with the necklace marked with seed pearls. The sleeves have the late French puff and are elbow length.

The entire skirt is embroidered in a rose design, beginning with rosebuds down the front panel, growing larger and more scattered as they reach the bottom of the gown, and having great masses, indeed a perfect chaos of roses, scattered over the train. It has the full skirt, which sweeps the ground at the front and sides.

She will carry two dozen jacqueminot roses in her left arm and wear only pearls for ornaments.

The entire girdle is formed of pearls.

Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks—Heavy white satin brocaded in gold roses, made with full court train, elaborately draped with lace. The roses are natural size, making an effect almost like cloth of gold. Brussels pointed applique in a design of true lovers' knots and marguerites interwoven, decorate the revers, which fall full from the shoulder to the edge of the pointed bodice; a vest effect is continued panel-like down the front of the gown to the hem.

Mrs. Leslie M. Shaw, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury—Heavy white brocade elaborately trimmed with lace and pearls.

Mrs. Ethan Allen Hitchcock, wife of the Secretary of the Interior—White satin brocade, with garnitures of point lace.

Mrs. Paul Morton, wife of the Secretary of the Navy—White brocade, elaborately embroidered in silver, bodice trimmed with lace.

Mrs. Robert Wynne, wife of the Postmaster-General—White satin, brocaded in rosebuds, richly jewelled in pearls and emeralds, made with full court train, the low cut bodice incrusted with jewels, short sleeves of lace.

Baroness Mayor des Planches, wife of Italian Ambassador—Deep yellow satin, completely veiled in chiffon of a lighter shade, over which is draped tulle, embroidered in large designs of opalescent spangles, which extend from the waist line over the entire skirt and full court train. The bodice of yellow has a blouse-like effect, formed of spangled tulle, with volates of Brussels lace. Necklace of pearls and diamonds, and a bouquet of yellow roses.

Miss Gwendolin Cummings, of Boston—White silk, trimmed with Valenciennes lace.

Mrs. Joseph Manning, of New York—Very rich toilet of white panne velvet.

WARRANT ISSUED; STANFORD ARREST PROBABLE WITHIN VERY FEW HOURS

Member of Household at San Francisco Believed to Be the Person Wanted.

Dead Woman's Will May Reveal Motive for the Murder by Poisoning.

Under Surveillance in Mrs. Stanford Murder

Miss Bertha Berner, private secretary.

Albert Beverly, formerly a butler.

Miss Elizabeth Richmond, formerly a maid.

Miss Nora Hopkins, formerly a maid.

HELD IN STANFORD MANSION.

Ah Wing, housekeeper.
Ah Young, houseboy.
Li Yeng, a cook.
Ah Lee, second cook.
Sing Wong, second butler.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—Within a few hours, possibly before night, the San Francisco police will make an arrest in the Mrs. Leland Stanford case. New facts which warrant this arrest are now in possession of the police here. They do not say that the person to be arrested will be charged directly with the murder of the great woman philanthropist, but are positive that this person knows who placed the poison in the bicarbonate of soda which killed Mrs. Stanford.

By cable from Honolulu, where Mrs. Stanford died of the poisoning, it is announced that local authorities have learned that the chemical analysis has shown strychnine in Mrs. Stanford's body. They were waiting for official knowledge of this before making the arrest. A warrant has already been issued for the person wanted here.

Points to the Household.

Simultaneously with the arrest here there may be another arrest in Honolulu. The police will say nothing of this, however. It is known that they have put one of Mrs. Stanford's Chinese servants here through the third degree and the arrest may be made on what he said at that time. All facts point to a member of the Stanford household.

In their investigations here the police have found a bottle containing strychnine in the Stanford home.

"When Mrs. Leland Stanford's will is made public the motive of her murder may be revealed," declares President David Starr Jordan of the Leland Stanford University. Dr. Jordan probably knows more of Mrs. Stanford's private affairs than any living person, save perhaps her attorneys.

Miss Bertha Berner, Mrs. Stanford's secretary for twenty-five years, is one who gets $20,000 under the will. It has been shown by detectives working here and at Palo Alto, the other home of Mrs. Stanford, that Miss Berner bought a bottle of bi-carbonate of soda at the Stanford Pharmacy at Palo Alto just before Mrs. Stanford started for Honolulu. The police are inclined to believe that this is the same bi-carbonate which killed Mrs. Stanford after great quantities of strychnine had been placed in it. They assert positively, however, that Miss Berner is not a suspect.

Chinese Closely Watched.

Meanwhile, the Stanford mansion in San Francisco is under close guard. There are confined in this house, without permission to leave or communicate with the outside world, half a dozen Chinese employes of Mrs. Stanford.

With Mrs. Stanford's attorneys, President Jordan of the University will sail for Honolulu to-day on the steamer Alameda, there to aid the investigation. At the same time several local detectives will go and personally investigate the situation there. Analysis of the contents of Mrs. Stanford's stomach, now in possession of a chemist in Honolulu, has not yet been completed, but it is definitely known that strychnia was the cause of death.

Albert Beverly, the discharged butler, and Elizabeth Richmond, the former maid, freely discuss the fact that they have been under suspicion, and in all cases the names of those two have been associated.

Miss Richmond said to-day:

"It seems as though suspicion would naturally narrow down to two or three in the house. There was a little feeling of discomfort in the house the week after the attempt was made to poison Mrs. Stanford, and it affected Miss Berner, Ah Wing and Yeng."

Beverly Ready to Surrender.

Beverly said that if any charge was made against him he was willing to surrender at once to the police.

W. E. Jackson, head pharmacist at the Stanford drug store in Palo Alto, says that he sold Mrs. Stanford a package of bicarbonate of soda on February 6, which is probably the same that was in the bottle out of which she took the fatal dose.

Mr. Jackson was Mrs. Stanford's druggist. The package of bicarbonate of soda was wrapped up, labelled and given to Miss Berner with the other articles.

Enough to Kill Four.

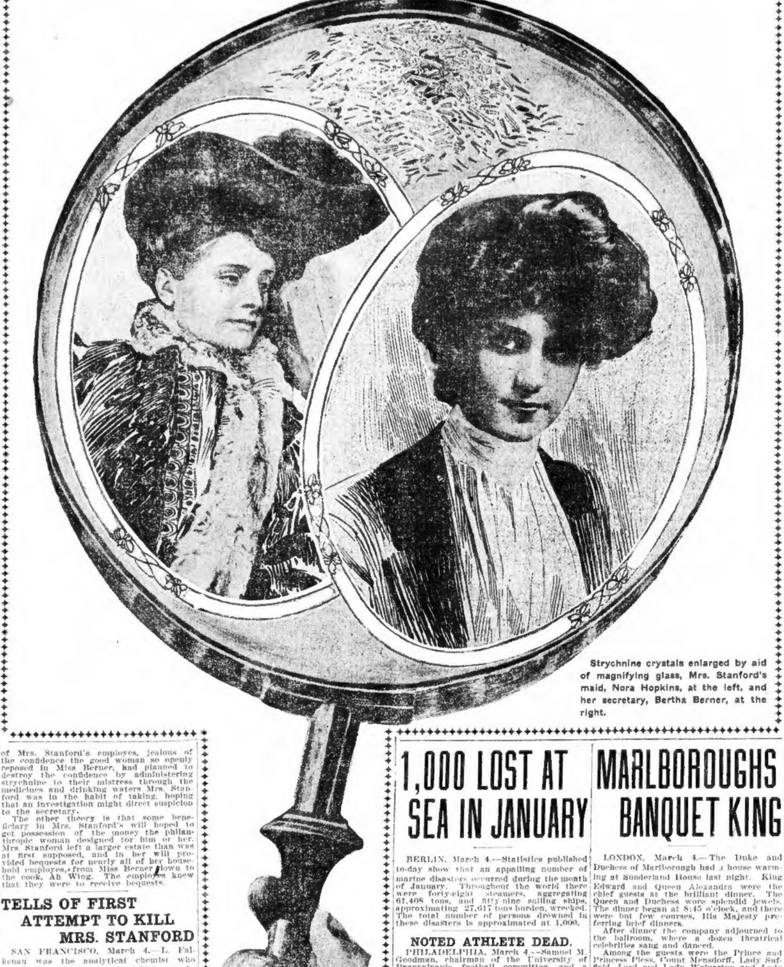
The poisoner who made the first attempt on Mrs. Stanford's life placed enough strychnine in the bottle of mineral water to kill four persons. The deadly drug was in crystalline form. There was no bicarbonate of soda in the water.

The poisoner was a bungler, a person unfamiliar with the fact that strychnine does not dissolve readily in water. These are the facts that Expert Chemist Louis Falkenau adduced from his analysis of the poisoned mineral water that was given to Mrs. Stanford on the 14th of last January, when she was made ill prior to her departure for Honolulu.

Two Possible Motives.

The police have found two possible motives for the crime. One is that some of Mrs. Stanford's employes, jealous of the confidence the good woman so openly reposed in Miss Berner, had planned to destroy the confidence by administering strychnine to their mistress through the medicines and drinking waters Mrs. Stanford was in the habit of taking, hoping that an investigation might direct suspicion to the secretary.

The other theory is that some beneficiary in Mrs. Stanford's will hoped to get possession of the money the philanthropic woman designed for him or her. Mrs. Stanford left a larger estate than was at first supposed, and in her will provided bequests for nearly all of her household employes, from Miss Berner down to the cook, Ah Wing. The employes knew that they were to receive bequests.



Strychnine crystals enlarged by aid of magnifying glass, Mrs. Stanford's maid, Nora Hopkins, at the left, and her secretary, Bertha Berner, at the right.

TELLS OF FIRST ATTEMPT TO KILL MRS. STANFORD

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—L. Falkenau was the analytical chemist who tested the lithia water in which strychnine had been placed in the first attempt, January 14, to kill Mrs. Leland Stanford. In his report to her he said:

"The strychnia (in the water) was in the form of the crystallized alkaloid, and was probably impure. The total amount of fixed matter contained in a fresh sealed bottle equals 8 parts in 100,000 parts and reacts slightly alkaline.

"A water glass full, five fluid ounces, would hold in solution about 0.8 grains of strychnia. According to Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence 0.5 grains of strychnia proved fatal in the case of Dr. Warren in fourteen minutes, but people have been known to recover from doses of seven grains. The ordinary dose is one-twentieth of a grain."

The bottle which contained the poisoned mineral water is still in the possession of Mr. Falkenau. He also has the crystals of strychnia that were taken from the liquid. To-day he said:

"There was a little over two fluid ounces in the bottle, and in the bottom was about one grain of some undissolved substance.

"In the poisoned solution that was sent to me there was a quantity of strychnine, but too little to make a complete analysis. The solution was fully saturated. If the poisoner shook the bottle well when he placed the strychnine in it, then it was all as strong as what we examined. A tumbler filled with the mineral water would have proven a fatal dose. It is likely that the poisoner dropped the crystals into the bottle without shaking it up. They went directly to the bottom, and there we found the residue.

"Whoever attempted to poison Mrs. Stanford was a bungler, because had the poisoner been clever he or she would have known that strychnine does not dissolve readily in water, and a little water would have been added to the solution to obliterate all trace of poison in the bottom of the bottle.

"The strychnine was of the ordinary commercial brand, and there was enough in the solution to prove fatal to four people."

MEMORIAL DAY HORSE PARADE

The Boston Work Horse Parade Association has begun active preparations for the third annual parade, which will take place in the forenoon of Memorial Day, May 30, 1905. At each of the two parades already held about 700 horses were exhibited, and it is expected that this number will be exceeded at the next parade. In addition to the regular prizes there will be awarded this year a "highly commended" ribbon.

The association is a charitable one, and its sole object is to improve the condition and treatment for work horses. A perceptible improvement in the grooming and treatment of work horses in Boston has been effected by the organization. Lame, dock-tailed and thin horses will be excluded from the parade. The show is designed to be an object lesson of how horses should look, how they should be harnessed and how they should be driven.

MOCK ELECTION OF ALDERMEN

By the proportional ballot system, which was explained at the Massachusetts Reform Club and afterwards practically demonstrated, the following members of the Board of Aldermen were chosen by a mock election.

Melvin O. Adams, Patrick A. Collins, Thomas W. Lawson, Henry M. Whitney, Eugene N. Foss and Edmund Billings.

Robert Lyson of Toronto explained the system. It is used in Belgium and some other foreign countries, he said. He continued

"The number placed upon a ballot as your first choice for a candidate, signifies your preference. Should the man be elected your choice would be fulfilled. But, on the other hand, your number 2 would fall into line for a transfer vote.

"Provided No. 1 was not elected, No. 2 might be by transference of the number of votes over the quota required to make a first selection."

A. BLUM DENIES FRAUD CHARGES

Speaking for his father, Anthony Blum of this city, president of the Twentieth Century Mining Company, who has been sued by Conrad Dietrich of Pittsburg for the recovery of $11,000, alleged to have been secured through the fraudulent misrepresentation of the value of the shares of the company, L. V. Blum of No. 43 Tremont street, to-day stated to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"My father is now on his way to the property of the Twentieth Century company in Ontario, Canada. I can say for him that the charges of Mr. Dietrich are not well founded. The claim that he was sold 1,000 shares at $11 a share when the actual value was not more than $1 is not true. Eleven dollars was the market price when the stock was sold him. The statement that we sold $800,000 worth of the $2,000,000 capital stock is not true. We sold 80,000 shares, but not at the par value of $10. Some of the sales were made as low as $2 and as high as $11 and over. We paid dividends for some time, but from earnings, not from the sale of stock. The property is not idle. It is being worked in a small way."

LEGISLATORS SEE BUNKER HILL BALL

The sixth annual ball of the Bunker Hill Democratic Club of Ward 4 was distinguished by the presence of many members of the Legislature and the city government. Among the guests were President Dolan of the Common Council, Election Commissioner David B. Shaw, Aldermen Cauley and Hennessey, Senator Mellen and Representatives Barrett, Power, Ware, Hickey, Quinlan and Cadigan.

MARLBOROUGHS BANQUET KING

LONDON, March 4.—The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough had a house warming at Sunderland House last night. King Edward and Queen Alexandra were the chief guests at the brilliant dinner. The Queen and Duchess wore splendid jewels. The dinner began at 8:45 o'clock, and there were but few courses, His Majesty preferring brief dinners.

After dinner the company adjourned to the ballroom, where a dozen theatrical celebrities sang and danced.

Among the guests were the Prince and Princess Pless, Count Mensdorff, Lady Suffield, Lord and Lady Wolverton and Lady Grenfall. The Duchess's father and her brother, W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., were not present. They are now in Paris.

New Era in New England Journalism

To-morrow's number of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will mark it. It will be distinct, triumphant and thoroughly enjoyable. To-morrow's Sunday issue of this newspaper is the inauguration number. It will be a veritable photographic and reportorial reproduction of the impressive ceremonies and the glittering pageant that will usher Theodore Roosevelt in as the next President of the United States. The best written stories of the great event will reach the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN through its leased wire service. This description will be illuminated by the pens of the most skilful artists and illustrated with pictures taken by the most expert manipulators of the camera. If you did not get to Washington you may see all that happened in the pages of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

A Giant Who Has Been Growing for 129 Years.

And he is a very familiar figure, too, for it is that of good old Uncle Sam. The expansion of the venerable gentleman with the silken whiskers from the time of George Washington to that of Theodore Roosevelt is an amazing record of progress unparalleled by anything in the history of the world. In a double page illustrated article the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will tell in graphic way the story of this marvelous growth. Some very picturesque comparisons are made in this most entrancing story that reads like pages from the writings of Jules Verne.

One of the striking pictures shows a gigantic egg of to-day, representing 1,666,000,000 dozen of eggs laid by the hens of Uncle Sam's domain last year, compared with the poor little hen of 1776. Our unrivalled supremacy in iron and steel manufacture and agricultural produce are features of the big story.

President at Home and Mrs. Roosevelt's Inauguration Gown.

Here are two features that are timely and of intense interest, both to men and women. General Charles H. Grosvenor tells of the President as a man of peace and as a lover of his home and family. This characteristic of the Chief Magistrate is little spoken of, and General Grosvenor is the man who is well calculated to tell the story.

Now as to that inauguration gown which has set all Washington astir! Listen! "The material of this costume is a soft, but rich quality of satin, very lustrous on the surface and of a delicate and exquisite shade of—"

But why attempt to tell about it here. It cannot be done in the limited space. But in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN the gown will be described in minute detail and with it will appear a carefully drawn picture of it.

Can Marriage Be Made Scientific?

The questions of the restriction and regulation of marriage are being considered seriously all over the country. Dr. G. F. Lydston, a distinguished physician of Chicago, would bar from marriage inebriates, criminals, persons tainted with insanity and other ailments. He says that society for its own protection will adopt some method for the rational and scientific control of matrimony. In the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN many others of prominence discuss this vital question from various standpoints.

Genuine Diary of a Real Shop Girl at $6 a Week

It is the real diary of a real shop girl, in which she tells how she lives luxuriously on $6 a week and is one of the most interesting stories that has been written in a long time. It will be printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. The girl tells all about it right from the inside, and there isn't a working young woman in Boston or any other New England city who will not want to read the pages from the girl's notebook.

Great Hospital Full of Love—Physicians and Nurses Affected.

This is the story of a great epidemic in the City Hospital of Baltimore. All of the doctors and nurses have got it. "The cases are progressing." That is the latest bulletin. But the end is not yet. For fear of the spread of the disease it has been found necessary to post this notice:

> Any nurse who speaks to a physician or student on other than professional affairs will be expelled.

This fascinating story, with appropriate illustrations, will be found in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Bide-a-Wee Home for Homeless Cats and Deserted Dogs.

A rich and renowned New York woman is founding a real hospital to house the tramps of dogdom and the vagrant cat world to save them from the pound and then to find good homes for them just like it is done for little abandoned babies. The woman who had done this unique bit of philanthropy has written a fascinating article telling all about it for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. It appears, fully illustrated to-morrow.

They are Digging up the Body of John Paul Jones.

But they are doing it so that they can bring back to America the bones of our first great naval hero. It was he who said: "We haven't begun to fight yet," and then he lashed two ships together and fought on the enemy's deck. Read the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN for this.

A Long-Distance Honeymoon, Most Unique on Record.

This is the most unique honeymoon on record. Just think of it—a honeymoon with your bride four miles away. This story is told in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. It relates how an octogenarian millionaire took a pretty bride in order to outwit his scheming relatives and how he now woos her over the telephone while she is four miles away.

How a Comic Opera Song Convicted Kentucky Murderer.

A man in jail in Lexington, Ky., declares that he was convicted by the song of a comedian. His lawyers base their plea for a new trial on this ground. It is unprecedented in legal history. The queer story is told fully in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Mrs. Louis Baechle, a Maine girl, tells in this issue of the paper also why "I spited dea, mamma and got married on the stage." It will be read with the greatest interest throughout New England.

Mrs. Osborn tells how fat women may appear fashionably slender. It is one of the inimitable articles from the pen of this gifted creator of fashions for the fashionable women of America.

Scarlet Lies. Scarlet Lies! Scarlet Lies!

This great dramatic love story, which starts in the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, will be continued in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Nobody can afford to let this great newspaper get away from them. Filled with the finest news features, art work and special articles of interest, the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be the most complete paper that has ever been issued in this section of the country.

Rear-End Collision.

The accident was due to a rear-end collision between the two sections of a train bound for the inauguration over the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Nearly all the dead and hurt are Ohio national guardsmen.

The accident happened at Clifton station, eight miles west of this city, where the first section of the train stopped to repack a hot box, and was run into by the second section. The train ahead was the first section of the inauguration special of seven coaches, which left Cleveland at 1 P. M.

STOCK MARKET CLOSE STRONG

A bank statement unfavorable in practically every item, not only failed to help the bears in their efforts to depress prices, but was totally ignored by the bulls, who closed the market in strong shape. Tennessee Coal & Iron, which had previously dropped down to 87½, rose to 89. Chicago Northwestern sold up 2 to 242 and the general list rallied fractionally. There were so many absentees that trading was comparatively dull, more interest being taken in the inauguration ceremonies than in the speculation.

Boston had another drive at Utah Mining, the stock dropping below forty. Boston & Maine gained three for the day, Boston Elevated lost one, New Haven gained one, while United Fruit gained one and three-quarters at the close.

COURT SUSTAINS $7000 VERDICT

The full Bench of the Supreme Court to-day sustained the verdict of $7,000 given to Thomas R. McCarthy, of Brookline, against the Boston Elevated Railroad Company by a jury in the Superior Court. The suit was brought by Mr. McCarthy to recover for personal injuries received by him in being struck by a car on Boylston street, Wright's Hill, Brookline, July 3, 1901.

The case was sent to the Supreme Court on a question of whether or not Mr. McCarthy was in the exercise of due care at the time of the accident. The court finds that he was.

BURGLARS ROB SALOON OF $105

Burglars entered Joseph Coughlin's liquor store, No. 461 Broadway, South Boston, early to-day, and coolly rifled the cash drawer of $105, people passing by to work mistaking the thieves for the bartenders preparing to open the store.

Hardly had they escaped with their booty when the real bartenders appeared, discovering the robbery at once. The police were notified and sent out an alarm to the other stations, resulting in the arrest of two men, Harold Quirk, nineteen years old, of No. 227 Bowen street, South Boston, and John Drew, of No. 306 Third street, South Boston.

Quirk was searched at the police station and $37, most of it in change, was found upon his person. A smaller sum was found in Drew's pockets. The men were held in $1,000 each by Judge Fallon in South Boston District Court to-day.

WILL SPEAK ON TRADE SCHOOLS

The first official utterance of the "Flying Wedge" on the subject of industrial education will be delivered by Harry J. Skeffington next Wednesday night before the Lawrence Central Labor Union. He will explain the question from the standpoint of the worker, indorsing the explanation made by Governor Douglas in his speech at Brockton recently from the standpoint of the manufacturer.

Mr. Skeffington knows just what the Governor hopes to accomplish in the way of trade school legislation. He has been getting the views of labor leaders on the subject and says that they are in accord with it. His speech at Lawrence will be the first of a series to be delivered throughout the State.

GAYNOR, GREENE UNDER ARREST

Quebec, March 4.—Colonel John F. Gaynor and Captain B. D. Greene, wanted in the United States for their alleged complicity in the peculations of former Captain Oberlin M. Carter at Savannah, Ga., were arrested here to-day and will be sent back to the United States. This is in line with the decision of the Privy Council in London, which decided that the Canadian Government made an error in not delivering the prisoners to the United States while they were under arrest.

This, it is believed, will end the five-year fight Gaynor and Greene have made against trial on the charges against them. The specific charge against them is conspiracy to defraud the United States Government. The arrest was made by Canadian officials.

SUSPECTED OF POISONING, HE SLAYS SELF

Ira Ellis, of Orleans, Blows His Head Off With a Shotgun.

WAS TO BE ARRESTED

Special to the Boston American.

ORLEANS, March 4.—Ira T. Ellis of East Orleans, following a two-hour severe cross-examination with regard to the attempt to poison Mrs. Etta Lewis and her nineteen-year-old daughter May, blew his brains out to-day with a shotgun in his barn.

Dr. Samuel P. Davis, the medical examiner of the district, and Deputy Sheriff H. M. Percival have gone to the Ellis home. They believe that the suicide of the man established that it was he who attempted the lives of the two women by putting paris green in their tea.

Ellis, who was fifty three years old and married, arose at 6 o'clock to-day, made a fire in the kitchen stove and went to the barn. Nothing was seen or heard of him by his wife or nephew, Lewis Collins, who was at the house, until about 7:30 o'clock, when they heard a shot. The boy ran to the barn and found the man lying on the floor dead.

Side of Head Blown Off.

The left side of the man's head was blown off. The double-barreled shotgun with which he had killed himself was lying at the side of the body.

"I heard the shot," said young Collins, "and ran to the barn. My aunt did not hear the shot. I told her about it. I found Uncle Ira lying on his left side in a great pool of blood. The gun was by his side. My aunt fainted when she saw him."

The motive for the attempted crime is not entirely clear yet, although it is said that Ellis, although married, had been annoying Miss Lewis with his attentions for some time and that he sent her a number of threatening letters which her brother, Arthur, to-day turned over to the authorities.

Homes Near Each Other.

The Lewis and Ellis homes are near each other. Mrs. Lewis and her daughter were in the habit of leaving the teapot on the range when they went out in the evening so they could have a hot drink when they returned home. On the evening of Washington's birthday the mother and daughter attended an entertainment, but when they reached home they were so tired that they went to bed without their tea.

The next morning they found a green trail from the rear of the house leading to the stove, and the tea had a green color. They at once suspected that an attempt had been made to poison them, and the authorities were notified of what had happened.

It was Ellis who first volunteered any information as to who might have done it. What Ellis told led to the gathering of a posse, and a search of the woods near here followed. Later Ellis was put through the "third degree." This followed a search of the Ellis homestead.

Found Poison in Pail.

The officers found a pail in which Paris green had been mixed, and the whisk broom with which it was mixed on a dump at Ellis's home. He admitted owning the pail, and said he had mixed the poison to kill potato bugs.

Footprints near the Lewis home were measured, and Deputy Sheriff Percival says Ellis's shoes fitted the footprints exactly. Ellis told several conflicting stories when questioned, the officers said.

Deputy Sheriff Bradford said Miss May Lewis told him to-day Ellis had written her threatening letters and had greatly annoyed her. Her brother, Arthur Lewis, drove over from Chatham to-day with seven letters which the police say were written by Ellis to Miss Lewis.

Ellis was at a dance the night the Paris green was put into the teapot, but the police say he was not there all the evening.

The poison was in a liquid form, and the finding of a vessel in which Paris green had been mixed at Ellis's home, it is said, would have been followed by his arrest to-day.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

WILL ALLOW BOXING MEET OF THE A. A. U.

All is in readiness for the A. A. U. championship bouts, which are scheduled to be held in Mechanics' building next Monday evening, and it does not look as though there will be any attempt on the part of the police to prevent the meeting from taking place, as rumored.

Chairman Emmons of the Board of Police Commissioners said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"Some time ago the Board gave its sanction to the holding of these championships, and this of course with the understanding that the Amateur Athletic Union would live up to the letter of the law. The Board has watched the progress of the affair, and has even gone so far as securing tickets, through misrepresentation on the part of an officer.

"So long as the A. A. U. conduct their arrangements of the affair as in the past, just so long the Board will refrain from interfering."

Considering this statement, the holders of coupons should rest easy, as there doesn't seem to be any danger of Judge Emmons and his vigilant band putting a stop to the exhibitions.

GIANTS MAY LOSE 'IRON MAN'

DALLAS, Tex., March 4.—Joe McGinnity of the Giants made the startling announcement that he would retire from the game unless he could fix up some monetary differences that exist between himself and the New York National League club.

The Giants are now at Savannah in training, and McGinnity's failure to report has caused the club much worry. Joe will pitch a game for the South McAlister team to-morrow. He declares he is not in the least anxious to join Brush's forces.

TOM JENKINS DEFEATS PARR

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Tom Jenkins, of Cleveland, former catch-as-catch-can champion of the world, defeated Jim Parr, of England, catch-as-catch-can style, in two straight falls. Jenkins won the first fall with a half-Nelson and inside-crotch hold in 19 minutes 12 seconds, and the second and deciding fall in 9 minutes fifty-five seconds with a head lock.

COE'S RECORD MAY NOT HOLD

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 4.—James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, who is chairman of the record committee, has received from the Boston A. A. an application for a record for W. W. Coe, Jr., of 49 feet 1⅞ inches for putting the shot.

Word has been received that the shot that Coe put at Medford, Mass., last week was a bag of shot inclosed in a leather cover, which shot is not allowed when records are considered. In that case Coe's mark won't stand.

HIGHLANDERS' EASY PRACTICE

Special to the Boston American.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 4.—The initial practice of the New York Highlanders was not hard. Holycross, Duff and Puttmann showed aptitude for meeting the ball squarely and forcibly.

Newton and Hogg arrived from Los Angeles. Newton has been ill this Winter with diphtheria and has not yet entirely recovered from its affects.

MAY BATTLE AT SAVANNAH

Special to the Boston American.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 4.—Savannah men interested in sports have made an offer to the managers of Britt and Nelson to pull off their next fight in this city. It is not stated what offer is made, but it is said to be a liberal one.

It is believed that the lightweight championship match could be held here without interference from the authorities.

GINGER WON TROPHY.

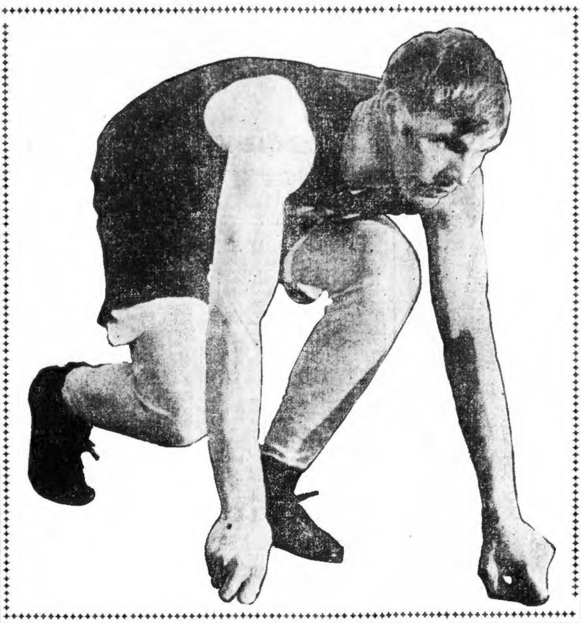
Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 4.—Thousands of spectators witnessed the races on the Merrimack River for the John B. Farick Company silver trophy, which was won by Ginger, owned by Harry Clough of this city. The heats were quarter mile, best three in five.

YALE BADLY BEATEN.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 4.—Cornell closed her basketball season by a decisive victory over Yale. The score at the end was 18 to 5 in favor of the Ithacans, although it was tied at 3 to 3 at the end of the first half. For Yale, Kinney threw the only basket.

C. M. FRENCH OF WORCESTER ACADEMY TEAM



REFEREE CROWLEY PUTS A STOP TO CHELSEA FIGHT

In the ninth round of the main bout at the Douglas A. C. between George Cole, of Philadelphia, and Sam Langford, Referee Bill Crowley stopped proceedings and declared the bout no contest and sent the men to their corners. This abrupt termination did not come as a great surprise to the members present, as the men were warned in the seventh round that something would happen if they persisted in their tapping methods.

It was the first appearance of Referee Crowley inside the ropes in Chelsea, but he certainly made good and showed by his summary action that he would not stand for anything but the real thing, and he had the support of the fans present. The club backed up the dictator and pleased the fans by announcing that they would have the privilege of seeing the next show, and everybody was satisfied but the principals in the evening's entertainment.

Referee Gets in the Game.

When the referee stepped in and stopped the mill and gave as his reason for doing so that neither boxer was trying his best there was a little excitement for a few minutes. Each man wanted to make a statement in his own behalf and it looked like a caucus in full swing, the mitt wielders trying to get an opening with more zest than at any time during the time they were in the ring. Cole said that he reckoned that Langford was too good a man to take chances with at cutting loose, and therefore his plan of campaign was to fortify himself by protecting himself at every opportunity, and Langford, not to be outdone in the Gaston-Alphonse act, said as much for his opponent, and added a few other remarks about his character in the ring as being clean and he never intended to put mud-spots on it. After the oratorical contest was over, the meeting was adjourned and the members went away with their coupons that will entitle them to see a live contest.

When the men appeared in the ring Cole, who is classed as a middleweight down Philadelphia way, looked the part and towered over the Hub man. There is no doubt that his bigger proportions were a handicap to Langford, as he is a dangerous foe in his own division, let alone putting him up against a welterweight. Accordingly Langford was not anxious to take any chances of getting the worst end of it, and did a lot of fancy stepping that would have made a dancing master envious in trying to keep out of Cole's reach. Cole, equally zealous not to get in the way of the famous right cross that Langford can handle to perfection, showed a big spirit of stalling, and the affair dwindled down to a crackerjack sparring match, with feinting and two-stepping being the features.

Hard Punches Not Allowed.

In the eight and a half rounds they travelled there were hardly a half dozen hard blows delivered, and it was apparent to the fans that there was not much doing. For four rounds Cole had whatever advantage there was, as he had spasms of aggressiveness, and Langford showed a disposition to keep out of his reach. Langford had Cole's mouth bleeding in the fifth round by getting home one of his stinging left jabs. It was a nice cakewalk in the sixth, and in the seventh the referee had his little say, and the men spruced up a bit. A continuation of the shadow boxing in the ninth prompted the action of the referee after half of the round was completed.

There was some lively work done in the preliminaries, which fully compensated for the tameness in the main one. Tommie Quinn, of Brockton, a rugged knight of the mitt, had a hot dispute with Willie Riley, of South Boston, and they went six slashing rounds, with Quinn getting the award. Frank Hawkins and Young Rouse O'Brien went six fast rounds to a draw.

TRIANGULAR FENCING MEET WON BY TECH

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology team was in grand form and defeated Cornell and Harvard in the triangular fencing meet held at the Tech Gym.

The contest between Tech and the Ithacans was close and exciting, the former pulling out a winner with a score of thirteen bouts and a margin of two over their adversaries.

By the absence of A. Tyng, the Harvard team was lamentably weakened, and could only succeed in winning three bouts. There was a band of Crimson students present who tried hard to spur their team on to victory.

Captain Jorge Lage, of Tech, carried off the individual honors, winning six bouts, which sustained his record of no defeats for the season. Perhaps the best bout was between S. M. Henry, of Tech, and H. Hechheimer, of Cornell, the former winning in brilliant fashion.

JOE WALCOTT TO MEET 'KANGAROO'

George Gunther, the Melbourne Kangaroo, is matched with Joe Walcott at the Eastern A. C., Portland, on March 14, for fifteen rounds. This will be the first time the Black Demon has fought since he injured his hand.

* * *

There will be a peppery contest when Blink McClosky meets Guy Ashley at the Apollo A. C. in Salem next Tuesday night, as there are some old scores to be settled, and the Fall River boy will need to be at his best to last any distance, as Blink is on the warpath and wants a chance to tour the country and a few wins will put him about right to start away. This ten-round bout, with the one between Murray and the Buffalo Sunflower, makes the bill an attractive one.

* * *

Scotty Coyne, of Manchester, N. H., says he wants to hitch up with Kid Barrish as soon as possible, but wants the little Hebrew to make 112 pounds and post a forfeit to that effect. Coyne has had trouble before by taking on boys with more weight, and claims to weigh in at 112 pounds.

* * *

Joe Obrine, of Cambridge, is ready to tackle any of the 112-pound youngsters, and will gladly meet Young Sullivan, of Roxbury, at his weight.

George Hayes, of Cambridge, wants a crack at some of the 135-pounders, and will match up with Sam Harris at any club.

* * *

Word comes from Fall River, where George and Guy Ashley are training together, that the boys have done little else but practice knockout punches, and Guy has learned how to put Blink McCloskey away when he meets him at the Apollo A. C., in Salem, next Tuesday night. Guy claims that he outpointed Blink at their last meeting, but will not be satisfied with anything but a knockout on the coming occasion.

* * *

Tommy English would like to hook up with Eddie Carr, the fast Charlestown boy, as Al Delmont fails to notice Carr's challenge, and the little Cambridge fighter is capable of putting up a good argument with any of them in his class.

* * *

Dave Deshler wants to show the Lawrence fans that their pride, Jimmy Burke, is overrated, and Dave is about the size to do it, as he had the best of John A. Sullivan, who Burke also showed superiority over, and the combination looks good.

* * *

Fred Sidney offers to take up Mattie Baldwin at 128 pounds, and the colored boy is confident that he can spoil Mattie's winning career in short order.

SCHOOLBOY GAMES DREW BIG CROWD

nie Osthues, and the best flyers among the schoolboys of the East cantered up to the mark.

President McCabe's Talk.

A business meeting of the schoolboys was held at the B. A. A. previous to the games, in which considerable executive business was done, and President McCabe, of the A. A. U., gave the nutalers representing ten schools a good talk on amateur athletes.

Several schools were reinstated, and Mitchell's of Lowell and Demerritt's were admitted to membership. Exeter's relay record made at the big A. A. A. games was not allowed. A committee was appointed to confer with the B. A. A. in regard to having the relay races counting in the adding up of points. Captain Schick of Harvard spoke, as did Payson Dana of the H. A. A.

Worcester Academy, the school that expected to make a grand showing with a strong aggregation of fast material, held the prominent part of the hall on the big stage, and they were a lusky-lunged crowd and cut loose every time a member of their team made his appearance wearing the colors.

It was 2:15 when Hughey McGrath sent the first heat away in the forty-yard dash.

Rogers, of Dedham, had it all his own way in the opening heat. Sheehy, a dark horse from Weymouth, ran away with the second heat, in which Matthew, the Worcester crack, failed to fit.

The third heat was won by Bartholomew, of Andover. H. E. Whittaker, of Newton High, had a big margin in the fourth heat, and was picked for the finals.

Watson Beat Pistol.

D. E. Watson, of Roxbury Latin, got the best of the pistol in the fifth heat. The time made was 4 3-5 seconds, the fastest, but his stealing on the gun detracted from the performance. It was close for second place, as Woodruff, of Volkmann's, and Schlemm, of Brookline High, were tied. Tower, of St. Mark's, won the sixth. Hodgkinson, of Boston College Prep, beat the gun in the seventh heat and easily secured the heat.

The eighth heat was a pretty stretch all abreast. Sherman, of English High, won by an eyelash.

The officials were:

Referee, George W. Beals, B. A. A.; judges at finish, George B. Morison, B. A. A., H. L. Dadmun, B. A. A., W. F. Garcelon, Newton; timekeepers, F. M. Wood, B. A. A., J. G. Lathrop, Southboro, P. H. ISBELL NEEDED BY WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, March 4.—Owner Charles Comiskey of the White Sox will not give his permission to First Baseman Frank Isbell to leave the South Side team and become playing manager of the Wichita baseball club. Isbell has been asking for his release from the local manager all Winter. Comiskey wants the veteran first sacker to report to the White Sox for service again this season and is not willing to let the player off to become the head of his home club.

"I need him too much," Comiskey says to Isbell's friends.

Isbell, according to advices from Kansas, is thinking of accepting the managership of the Wichita team even without the release which he seeks. He will not be able to play unless he gets the consent of Comiskey. Without it he can sit on the bench and manage without anyone's consent. The difference of opinion between the player and owner may culminate the same as it did last Spring, however, when Isbell joined the White Stockings about a week before the training season closed, after holding out several weeks.

AUTOIST WALLACE ORDERS BIG RACER

William Wallace, the well-known automobile racer of this city, will not accept the chairmanship of the racing board of the American Automobile Association. This announcement was made by Mr. Wallace to-day to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN, who added the further interesting information that his reason for this attitude is his desire to compete in the Vanderbilt Cup race and his belief that a competitor in that event should not also be a race arbiter.

As evidence of his intentions in the speed line, Mr. Wallace has signed a contract for a F. I. A. T. racing machine of 1905 model, to be delivered here on or before June 1. This will be one of the duplicate cars now building to represent Italy in the International Cup race in France. As Italy, like other countries, will be entitled to five entries in the Vanderbilt Cup race contest, it is practically certain that Mr. Wallace will be a competitor in this event. His new car, though rated at one hundred, will, undoubtedly, be nearer 120-horse power.

It is also learned that H. L. Bowden, the crack Waltham autoist, who, has three times declined the racing board chairmanship, is likely to decline it if it is offered to him again.

M'COY WON ON KNOCKOUT BLOW

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 4.—"Kid" McCoy knocked out Jack Crawford after one minute and fifty seconds of fighting in the first session of their twenty-round bout at the Whittington Park Athletic Club.

The biggest crowd ever in attendance on a boxing bout in Hot Springs witnessed the contest, and in it was a liberal sprinkling of women. Jack Carig was awarded the decision over Kid Wedge on a foul in the third round in the six-round preliminary bout.

KID SULLIVAN BESTS O'NEILL

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—Kid Sullivan had all the best of Jack O'Neill in the wind-up at the Southwark Club. The Kid put it all over O'Neill in most of the rounds and staggered him by the force of his blows. Jack seemed to lack his usual dash and his jabs did not seem to hurt Sullivan a bit.

HARVARD LOST TO COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, March 4.—Columbia gymnastic team defeated Harvard by the score of 34 points to 20 in the first annual gymnastic contest between the two universities. C. A. Woodbury, of Harvard, made the best individual score, winning both the horizontal bar and club swinging events.

CONNOLLY WAS A HARD LOSER

PORTLAND, Me., March 4.—At the Lenox Athletic Club Tommy Sullivan, of Lawrence, who was expected to dispose of Bartly Connolly, of Portland, in three or four rounds, had to go twelve to get a hard-earned decision. The fight was fast throughout.

SMALL TALK FOR BASEBALL FANS

Jack O'Connor, who helped the Pirates to win a pennant, and who jumped the team for the American League, and also was accused of leading Chesbro and others astray, seems to be up against it in St. Louis, to which team he now belongs. Jack has been notified of a salary reduction of about one-half the amount he received last season, and he is balking, and threatens to retire from the game and devote his time to his saloon in that city. O'Connon was slated to be the Brown's captain during the coming season.

* * *

"Dummy Hoy introduced many curious and wonderful innovations into the game in his day," says Lave Cross. "He was playing centre field for Cincinnati one afternoon when our old St. Louis team was there for the series. In the first inning the man ahead of me in the batting order sent a long, low fly to Hoy, which he caught after a hard run, and we all noticed that he held the ball for a long time after it was in his hands.

"When the ball finally came back the pitcher picked it up carefully, looked at it as if he were searching for something and then gave me two low incurves, at which I made futile swings.

"Out of sheer curiosity, I stepped on the plate and asked to see the ball. The catcher handed it over, and there on its new white surface was scratched in Hoy's well-known hand:

"'Low in-curve.'

"The pitcher had followed 'Dummy's' tip and already had me 2-0. And even then Hoy had not exhausted his ingenuity, for he lifted his hands and gave Rhines a sign signal, which I interpreted as meaning, 'fast one, straight across,' but which really was a 'slow one,' and I struck out, greatly to Hoy's delight."

* * *

"It isn't always wise to engage in conversation with the people in the stands," says Lave Cross. "One day a bleacherite at Chicago had been particularly tantalizing in his remarks to me, and I finally called out: 'Oh, shut up, you $8-a-week counter jumper.' 'Yes, Lave,' he called back sweetly, 'that's about the size of my salary, but I've got it on you. I earn mine!'"

* * *

Nick Kahl, the infielder that Cleveland secured from Colorado Springs in the Western League and who has been slated for the position of utility infielder, is said to be flirting with an offer from the independent team at Altoona to which Alex Pearson and "Dutch" Gochnaur belonged last season. It is quite likely, however, that Kahl will turn down the offer, as it is scarcely probable that Altoona will offer him as much money as Cleveland.

* * *

"'Dutch' Gochnaur was always grumpy after a losing game and it was while he was in such a mood one day in Baltimore that he precipitated something very akin to a riot," says Harry Bemis.

"We had been beaten by a lucky hit in the eleventh inning and were all a little touchy. 'Dutchy' sat with the whip on the way down town. On Charles street we met a typical Baltimore crowd and one of the men yelled at us 'How'd ye come out?'

"'How'd we come out?' snapped back Goch. 'Come out of the gate, of course. How do you suppose we came out?'

"In about two minutes we were dodging the liveliest storm of bricks and stones I ever faced, and the shower didn't stop until we were safely within the doors of the New Carrollton."

BEZENAH WINS IN JIG TIME

CINCINNATI, O., March 4.—After about two minutes of fighting Gene Bezenah of Covington knocked out Joe Youngs of Buffalo in the first round of what was scheduled to be a fifteen-round bout before the Riverview Athletic Club. Bezenah caught Youngs in back of the ear.

O'DONNELL IN SKETCH.

Several well-known sporting people witnessed a sketch at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon that is bound to make a hit on the vaudeville stage, as the principals are Steve O'Donnell, the prominent boxing instructor, and Miss Sadie Palmer, who is one of the cleverest women boxers in the country. When the pair put on the gloves in a friendly bout, which is the climax to a physical culture exhibition, the set-to was the real goods, and big Steve has to do some hustling with the expert against him. John Lewis is the author of the little play, which created favorable comment from the interested audience.

DR. LOUGEST

ORIGINAL SPECIALIST

Has Built Up the Greatest Practice in Boston, Therefore Others Try to Imitate Him!

MEN! Read! Think! Learn! Profit by Others' Experience!

Dr. Lougest, 50 years ago, decided to devote himself to the study and cure of Men's Private, Obscure and Chronic Diseases. From the first his success was phenomenal. Doctors and patients all over the world marvelled at his skill and power over weakness and sickness. Other doctors, less able and less successful, began to imitate him, and they do it to this day. They envy his enormous practice and his world-wide fame. They try to copy him.

These Unprincipled Doctors watch Dr. Lougest as a cat watches a mouse, not only when he announces a new treatment, but they also copy the very wording of his advertisements and bob up with an imitation treatment which they claim is "just as good." When Dr. Lougest buys a great new electrical machine costing perhaps thousands of dollars, these imitators buy a little, cheap one, and announce that they have the real thing. When Dr. Lougest tells of a generous offer to patients—made to help some poor sufferer to an easy, safe and inexpensive cure—they make the same offer, but do they deliver the goods? How can they, with their limited means?

Not one of these so-called specialists ever originated a treatment or method. They live and fatten by copying mine. They copy my advertisements, my signs, my literature. They try to get my patients away by the "Pay when cured" dodge and such like.

I publish my picture. They follow along with the picture of some dead and gone "doctor" to lend a false dignity to their announcements.

NOW, MEN, WHOM WILL YOU TRUST?

Will you trust the original, successful and genuine specialist, Dr. Lougest, who lives up to his word, keeps his promises and cures his patients? Or will you unwisely place yourself in the hands of some imitator who may poison, maim or injure you for life?

MEN, I Am the doctor with the medicines no one else knows about—the medicines I have invented, the remedies I have discovered, and which I furnish free to my patients. I am the doctor who pays out-of-town patients' railroad fares here and home again. I am the original successful specialist who has cured all the men who have followed my treatment.

VARICOCELE relieved with one application of my treatment and permanently cured in a short time.

NERVO-DEBILITY CURED in 20 days' time—severest cases a little longer.

STRICTURE My seven-day stricture treatment is a wonderful achievement—the talk of the profession.

PROSTATITIS or inflamed prostate gland, causing kidney ailments, undermining the health of its victim, relieved immediately and cured at once.

BLOOD POISON with copper-colored patches, sore mouth and throat, rashes, rheumatic pains, swollen glands, ulcers, falling hair and loosened teeth, spinal trouble, and all the consequences of this dreadful disease, cured forever by my system of quick-acting medication—showing results in a few days. The cure begins at once, as soon as you undertake to follow my directions.

A Mystery of Boston

The Most Dramatic Love Story Ever Written

BY X and Z

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

ONLY a few short hours before and Stephen Holland, full of health and high in spirits, had crossed the threshold of the palatial residence of Robert Armstrong, on Commonwealth avenue. The fond hopes he had scarce dared allow himself filled his heart with sweet anticipation, and he hardly dare dream of realization. Within an hour he had known his hope was not in vain, yet now he found himself speeding in a luxurious parlor car on a special train flying to Mapella, his mind distracted between the supreme happiness that had come to him and dazed wonder that he should be so suddenly summoned home with such scant explanation.

In the full flush of his athletic young manhood, little did he dream of the tragedy or the mystery that awaited him, or of the complex web that was to alter the very appearance of life itself within a few short hours.

Stephen Holland was a young man to admire, and Robert Armstrong was one of the host who admired the keen-eyed, broad-shouldered, alert young lawyer. Therefore, it was not strange that the young man should have found himself that evening on the steps of the millionaire soap manufacturer's residence.

Two years before, when his fortune reached such magnitude, Armstrong had built the great house—not that he himself felt the need of any such huge dwelling, not that his simple wife loved grandeur, for she loved a real home better than any castle of brick and stone, but because Elizabeth and Robert Armstrong felt that with their wealth came a duty to their only child, Mary, a sweet girl whose grace and kindness would have made her loved, even had her father not amassed a great fortune.

The site had cost him half a million; the building and its contents were said to represent a round million dollars. It was a great, solid, imposing mass of red brick and white stone, with marble ornamentations here and there. There were two cupolas, one on either side of the main structure. One covered a great ballroom, and the other the centre of the picture gallery—the noblest in Boston. The architect had made use of a strange jumble of styles, the most pronounced being a bold adaptation of the Byzantine; so that the whole structure looked broad and rich and generous.

Merchant Prince by His Own Hands.

The house was as unlike its neighbors as Armstrong himself was different from the other residents of the Commonwealth avenue neighborhood. It was not by right of birth nor was it the daring flight of speculation and juggling with the world's markets that had placed him there. It was another and a more solid force that had raised him to his pinnacle of wealth and enabled him to build his great house—a slowly built up, patiently extended, doggedly watched, and now almost universal trade.

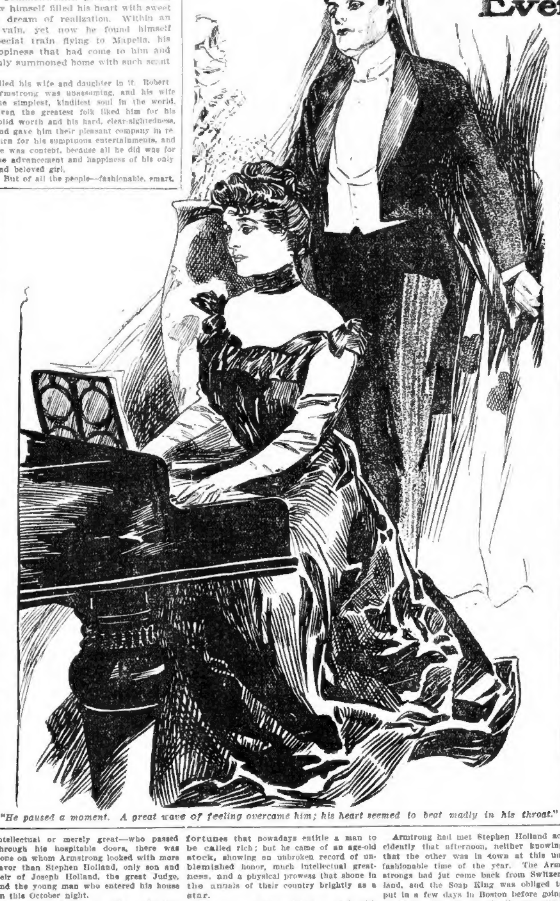
Robert Armstrong was the inventor and sole proprietor and manufacturer of the world-known Cleno soap.

He had been a rich man for many years, with a big, solid house in the old town of Mapella, ten miles distant from which was the place that he had converted from a waste into a hive of industry, where he had built his factories and works, and round which had sprung first a few cottages, then a straggling village, and finally the little village of Port Cleno, which he owned, and which was inhabited by none but his employes. There he had spent his days with his wife and growing daughter, partly in Mapella itself, and partly at Armstrong Towers, a small estate midway between that town and Port Cleno.

But four years ago a revolution in his business methods—the adoption of new machinery—had infused new life into the old-established business. Cleno soap, which had been a fairly well-known and reliable article, became in two years a household word and an absolute necessity in every self-respecting woman's home, and Robert Armstrong amassed the greater part of Mapella, of which he was now master

He then realized his ambition. He built a palace in Commonwealth avenue and installed his wife and daughter in it. Robert Armstrong was unassuming, and his wife the simplest, kindliest soul in the world. Even the greatest folk liked him for his solid worth and his hard, clear-sightedness, and gave him their pleasant company in return for his sumptuous entertainments, and he was content, because all he did was for the advancement and happiness of his only and beloved girl.

But of all the people—fashionable, smart, intellectual or merely great—who passed through his hospitable doors, there was none on whom Armstrong looked with more favor than Stephen Holland, only son and heir of Joseph Holland, the great Judge, and the young man who entered his house on this October night.



"He paused a moment. A great wave of feeling overcame him; his heart seemed to beat madly in his throat."

Stephen Holland was only moderately wealthy in comparison with the stupendous fortunes that nowadays entitle a man to be called rich; but he came of an age-old stock, showing an unbroken record of unblemished honor, much intellectual greatness, and a physical prowess that shone in the annals of their country brightly as a star.

But none of this weighed so much with Armstrong as his personal knowledge, based on two years' close friendship, that Stephen Holland was true and upright, handsome and strong, and the very soul of honor.

The millionaire had a deep personal liking for the young man, and in his heart he always hoped that it would be Stephen Holland who would come to him one day and ask for the hand of his idolized daughter, lovely Mary Armstrong, the queen of two Boston seasons, by right of her beauty and her charm.

Of course, Mary might have made one of the great matches of the world. With her face and her fortune, she was, without doubt, the greatest prize in the matrimonial market, and men bearing the noblest names in Europe had sought her hand. But Armstrong had no wish to see his gold replenish the coffers of an effete European family, impoverished through generations of extravagance and vice; nor had mere rank, though it be the very highest, any attraction for him.

He wanted his daughter to marry a man, above all things a man who would be true and honorable and tender, a fit mate for her, and a fit father for her children. He must be well-born, of course, and he must give her a position that would be an adequate setting for her matchless beauty and her enormous wealth.

Stephen Holland answered all these requirements, and Armstrong would rather have seen Mary his wife than married to a prince of the blood who made her unhappy, or a needy duke who sought her fortune to bolster up his great name.

For some months Armstrong had watched and waited in silence; but he could not determine how the young people felt toward each other, although they were great friends. When he approached his wife on the subject she answered in her simple, homely way:

"Let them alone, Robert. If they're going to make a match of it, they'll find each other without any help from us."

And he realized the wisdom of this, as he had often recognized her good judgment, and sometimes acted on it, greatly to his advantage; so he possessed his soul in patience, looking anxiously for signs that Mary was nursing some deep and secret attachment, which, however, he could not find.

Armtrong had met Stephen Holland accidently that afternoon, neither knowing that the other was in town at this unfashionable time of the year. The Armstrongs had just come back from Switzerland, and the Soap King was obliged to put in a few days in Boston before going to California with his family to attend to a very important enterprise in which he was largely interested.

Armstrong had gone home and told his wife of the meeting, and asked her to send strongs had just come back from Switzer- that night.

Stephen Holland had been unable to accept the invitation, owing to an important business appointment; but he got away as soon as possible, and instinctively his footsteps led him toward Commonwealth avenue.

"Won't you dine with us to-night quite quietly?" Mrs. Armstrong had written in her neat, painfully studied hand. "Only just ourselves. We shall enjoy a chat with you!"

"Only just ourselves." That meant they would be quite alone; he knew they were only passing through Boston. And if they were alone, that meant that he would have an opportunity of talking to Mary—of asking her the question that had been burning in his heart ever since he parted from her, when she left with her parents for Switzerland—parted from her with the question unasked, the all-important words unsaid.

Just as ardently as Armstrong desired him for a son-in-law did Stephen Holland desire to be the husband of Mary. For two years he had loved her silently, constantly, and with ever-increasing fervor. That he had never spoken was due to a delicate and chivalrous feeling on his part that she was so young, and that, with her enormous chances, she ought to be left to see the world untrammelled and undisturbed, before being called upon to make her choice.

But all that was changed now. The month's separation had proved intolerable. He had realized as never before how all his thoughts and ideals and aspirations were centred in Mary Armstrong. She was the sun round which his existence revolved; she was never out of his thoughts. Wherever he went he saw her face, and his only longing was to be near her. He could wait no longer; he must speak, he must know his fate, for in this uncertainty, which, graced by her presence, had been a kind of bliss, he could no longer carry on the ordinary business of life.

And this seemed a Heaven-sent opportunity. The Armstrongs were in town and alone. He knew them quite well enough to look in informally after dinner, having explained his reason for being unable to dine with them in a note sent by a messenger.

Enters Mansion of Splendor.

So he had walked up to the splendid mansion, looming massively through the night, with all its great windows brilliantly lighted, promising warmth and comfort and splendor within.

He gave his hat and coat to one of the footmen in rich, but quiet livery, and walked through the vast hall up the broad, branching staircase, without a glance at the riot of splendor and luxury that was spread about him.

The servant led him through several apartments on the first floor, all equally gorgeous. His feet sank into velvet carpets; everywhere his eye rested on costly and beautiful works of art. They were all genuine, whether antique or modern; for Robert Armstrong had that instinctive trait of connoisseurship that so often accompanied a very great business ability. Though of a florid type, the Soap King's taste was excellent and unerring.

At the door of a room known as the blue drawing room the visitor was finally announced.

It was a little less crowded, a little less like a museum than the other rooms. The walls were covered with brocade of a splendid peacock blue, with dull-gold threads glittering here and there. There were only a few pictures on them—one priceless Titian, and several others of lesser masters of the same period. There were personal knick-knacks on small tables—photographs, trifles of silver and gold—books and periodicals. The chairs were designed for comfort. A cheery fire burned on the hearth, and above the chimney-piece—which was banked with rare hothouse flowers—hung a portrait of Mary Armstrong.

In a big chair by the fire sat the man from whose toil all this wealth of luxury had sprung—Robert Armstrong. Directly Holland was announced, he sprang to his feet, and came forward to meet him with outstretched hands; while his wife, who sat opposite on a huge settee, covered with wonderful Chinese embroidery on a vivid yellow ground, looked up with a smile from her knitting, and moved her wicker work-basket away, so that he might sit by her side.

"This is an unexpected pleasure, Stephen," said Armstrong, gripping the young man's hand. "We were sorry you couldn't dine."

"So was I," answered Holland, in his pleasant, cheery voice. "But I thought you'd allow me to look in. It's so good to find anyone's friends in town."

"We're quite alone, as you see," replied the elder man. "It's very good of you to come to cheer us up. You're looking very well, Stephen. I'm glad to see you."

Found Warm Welcome Waiting.

Armstrong spoke in his heartiest tones, though his very heartiest could hardly be called warm. The man's face expressed him. It was hard and rugged—the essence of reserve. There was power in the broad brow, concentration in the steely eyes, something secretive and grasping in the long, shaven upper lip, and iron determination in the square chin. He looked every day of his fifty-five years, although the hair was still thick on his head, and his bushy side whiskers were only streaked with white.

He was of medium height, and his evening clothes hung loosely on his spare frame. He had a very grave voice, and always spoke low, but with extraordinary distinctness. There was nothing uncultured in his speech; indeed, except for the unmistakable stamp all over him of the man who at one time worked hard with his hands, and earned his bread by the sweat of his brow, there was nothing in his voice, appearance or manner to betray his very humble origin.

Stephen Holland sat down beside Mrs. Armstrong. She was very different to her husband. While he had progressed she had stood still. Elizabeth Armstrong was a woman of the people, and would always remain one, although one of the very sweetest and the very best.

Her face, though harsh in feature, was softened by an expression of great gentleness; from out of her eyes shown the kindliest nature in the world. She had never made any effort to make herself look anything but what she was—a plain, homely woman of fifty. She had the sense to know that it would be impossible and that she would only look ridiculous. So she always wore her brown hair banded neatly and parted in the middle, although she could surmount it with the finest diamond tiara in Boston, and her dresses, though rich, were always absolutely plain.

To-night she wore black silk, just slightly open at the neck, with a tucker of old lace. She might have been Armstrong's housekeeper, but for the brooch of enormous diamonds at her throat, and the splendid rings on her mittened hands, in which the knitting needles clattered ceaselessly. They were roughened, those capable hands of hers, by years of useful and honorable toil, and there were very few people in the world who thought any the less of her because they would never be quite white and smooth, like those of the ladies she mixed with. But she always wore black silk mittens, the better to show up the lustrous gems in the rings that her husband liked to see her wear.

Just as Holland could contain his impatience no longer, and was about to ask for her, the strains of a sweet and plaintive little melody on the piano fell on his ears.

"There's the girl," said Armstrong, interrupting, and a gleam of pure tenderness came into his steely eyes. "She went up to her own room just now in despair to write letters. She doesn't know you're here. Go to her, Stephen; you'll find her in the music room."

The young man rose with alacrity and disappeared through the heavily curtained doorway.

Mary Armstrong's parents looked at each other. Armstrong nodded with satisfaction. Elizabeth smiled tremulously. Something was in the air. It seemed as if they knew what was going to happen.

They were right—and yet—they little knew.

What's Your Favorite Recipe for Eggs?

"EGGWARD the Star of Empire Takes Its Way."

These may not be the exact words of dear old Bishop Berkeley, but they state an exact fact.

It has been said that the pen was mightier than the sword. This may do for lovers of pork, but, tush! tush! The COOP is mightier than either.

What would life be without the egg? It wouldn't be. Give us eggs or give us death.

The egg can be eaten raw or cooked, that's where it differs from roast beef. Raw, there is only one way to eat it. Break the shell and swallow it. BUT there are probably several billion ways of cooking eggs.

Do you know the best way?

Just write out the most appetizing way to cook eggs you know, and mail it to the "Egg Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 82 Summer street, Boston."

If your recipe is one of the five best received before Sunday, March 5, you'll get a beautiful cut glass and silver breakfast set, consisting of one sugar sprinkler, two salt shakers, and two pepper dittos.

German Pancake

Beat three eggs and half cup of milk, fry in butter; sprinkle with sugar and roll up. LENA D. STARRETT.
No. 625 Main street, Athol.

Fancy Baked Eggs

Break each egg into a cup, being careful not to break yolk. Put them in a hot buttered dish suitable for serving, putting a little salt on each egg. Bake until the white is firm. Add a little butter and serve at once. Garnish each egg with thin strips of breakfast bacon. MRS. C. A. WAITE,
No. 169 South Broadway, Lawrence.

Egg Omelet with Tomato

Beat five fresh eggs, add half a saltspoonful of salt and a pinch of white pepper. Put one small tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan; when hot pour in the beaten eggs. Have three solid tomatoes peeled and sliced, season with salt and pepper and fry brown on both sides. When the omelet is done slip the tomatoes in and fold over. MRS. M. SMITH.
No. 2,792 Washington street, Roxbury.

Fricasseed Eggs

Put two tablespoonsful of butter in frying pan; when melted, add tablespoonful of flour (stirring constantly), sprig of parsley (cut fine), half a dozen minced mushrooms and a half pint white stock (veal or chicken); simmer five minutes and add half a dozen hard boiled eggs sliced; boil up once and serve hot.
MISS MARGARET McCARTHY,
No. 3 Albion place, Charlestown.

Mulled Eggs

Toast a piece of bread nice and brown; beat up an egg very lightly in a bowl, then one and a half cups of milk, sweeten, and while hot pour on the eggs. Add the tost cut into small pieces. This is a delightful food for an invalid. MRS. MULVEY.
No. 118 Adams street, Lynn.

Egg and Cheese Sandwich

Three hard-boiled eggs, one-quarter pound cheese, one tablespoon melted butter, one-quarter teaspoon mustard and a pinch of salt. Chop eggs and cheese together; add the other ingredients and enough vinegar to moisten it, so that it may be spread on bread nicely.
MRS. J. B. FITTS.
No. 750 Columbus avenue, Boston.

The Egg Recipe contest closes to-night. Winners in the pie recipe contest will be announced in to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

First Aid To The Lovelorn

EDITOR WOMAN'S PAGE:
I have grown to love a young lady whom I have known about a year. Sometimes she seems to care a great deal for me, but lately I have heard that she paid a good deal of attention to another young man. I am a student and have two more years at school, and did not intend to make my feelings known to the young lady for at least another year, but I am now so afraid of losing her that I have thought of proposing to her and asking her to wait for me, as my prospects are very good after I leave school. Please advise me as to whether I should propose to the young lady now or not, and accept my hearty thanks in advance. A STUDENT.
Boston.

WHY do you not wait until you are out of school before proposing? You are going to meet a great many young ladies in the next two years and may change your mind. Besides, I do not think she cares enough for you at present to permit herself to become engaged to you. If she did she would not receive attentions from other young men. I should advise you to analyze your feelings toward this young lady very carefully and be sure that you really love her before asking her to consent to an engagement.

EDITOR WOMAN'S PAGE:
I am a young girl living in a small village and am madly in love with a young man. I have fancied that he returned my affection, but have learned that he is very attentive to two other girls, both friends of mine. Should I drop my girl friends for him? Also at a coming minstrel show would it be proper to send him flowers. EAST TAUNTON GIRL.
Taunton.

IF this young man cared for you as he should I do not think he would be quite so attentive to the other young ladies. If I were in your place I should not allow my thoughts to dwell quite so much on him. Try to keep him out of your mind altogether. It may be hard at first, but I think if you are determined you will succeed and will later on find that you were merely infatuated with him. I should not let him see that you cared for him, nor should I send him any flowers. If he really does care for you, he will soon discover that you have changed and in fear of losing you will devote a little more time and attention to you alone.

EDITOR WOMAN'S PAGE:
I am a young lady thirty years of age, and a man I have known for years has asked me to marry him. He is considerably older than me, but I love him and he loves me. He has no bad habits, though he is not pretty, but I know he would make me a good husband. Do you think the fact of his being so much older than I should make any difference? KITTY.
White Rock, R. I.

IF YOU are both sure that you truly love each other I see no reason why a difference in your ages should prevent you from marrying. You do not say how much older he is, but you are old enough to know your own mind, and if you are sure of him I do not think I should hesitate about accepting him.

EDITOR WOMAN'S PAGE:
I am a girl, sixteen years of age and last Summer, through my brother, I got an introduction to a young man one year my senior. He comes to my house very often because he is a great friend of my brother. He seems to think a great deal of me, as he makes me presents of jewelry and candy. I do not care for him, but am afraid to show it, as he told a friend of mine that if he should discover that I did not like him he would kill himself. What shall I do? Shall I continue letting him think I do care for him, or shall I let him see that I don't?
Attleboro. L. C.

YOU should let this young man know at once that you merely regard him as a friend. Do not permit him to give you any more jewelry. It was very wrong for you to accept these gifts in the first place. I do not think he will bother you when he discovers that you do not care for him, nor do I think he will do anything rash.

How to Care for The Child's Teeth

BETWEEN the fifth and sixth years four teeth make their appearance just back of the last temporary tooth in each jaw. These form the connecting link between the temporary and permanent set, and are commonly known as the sixth-year molars.

Parents look upon them as temporary teeth, because "my child has never lost a tooth." They are not replaced if lost, hence special care should be taken to preserve them. It frequently happens that these teeth come in without giving the slightest trouble or inconvenience to the child, and hence the parents are not aware of their presence.

A good plan is to count the teeth at intervals after the child passes the fifth year, and when more than twenty are present those over belong to the permanent set.

The sixth-year molar is the largest tooth of the permanent set, and a most valuable grinder. But coming as it does, and at a time when usually very little attention is paid to the teeth, it not infrequently happens that it falls a victim to neglect and early decay.

Preserve it by all means possible. But if it is so badly destroyed that permanent retention is impossible, strive to retain it till the child reaches the age of ten or twelve.

At this time the second, or twelfth-year, molars are about to appear, and if lost then the integrity of the arch will be preserved and further loss and irregularity avoided. A competent dentist must be allowed to select the proper time, if extrication becomes necessary.

Remember, however, that in order to preserve proper articulation and the harmony of the face, the loss of one frequently necessitates the removal of all four.

When the permanent tooth is ready to take the place of the temporary one, it will usually be found that the root of the temporary tooth has disappeared and that the crown simply hangs as by a thread to the gum.

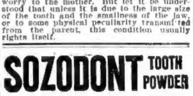
Nature has provided both dentist and forceps, and has, moreover, accomplished her work so easily and painlessly that neither child nor parent was aware of it. As the corresponding permanent tooth develops it pushes, presses on the apex of the temporary tooth ahead, and so causes its gradual absorption.

In speaking of the treatment of devitalized first teeth, I said their roots should not be filled, and now we see why. A filling would not be absorbed, and hence would stand in the way of the approaching tooth.

Eight more teeth make their appearance between the sixth and ninth years. The two lower central incisors usually precede the upper by a few months, and the two lower laterals follow the same rule. When these teeth come in it is seen that their cutting edges are serrated—having teeth like a saw—but these soon wear off, leaving the cutting edge free and smooth. It is said that these serrations help the eruption of the teeth.

These teeth very seldom come in regular, and are in consequence a source of great worry to the mother. But let it be understood that unless it is due to the large size of the tooth and the smallness of the jaw, or to some physical peculiarity transmitted from the parent, this condition usually rights itself.

SOZODONT TOOTH POWDER



is of proven value. Sixty years is a pretty good test. No acid, no grit. Ask your dentist.

The Austen Grays, who have been seen in Boston but once since their marriage last year, and who have been making their home in New York during the Winter, have not been idle socially, and their place in New York society is assured. They were present at the Vanderbilt ball a short time ago, and they are often seen together at the opera. Mrs. Gray is spoken of by New Yorkers as being a charming hostess and a matron of exceedingly pleasing personality. It is said that they plan to come to Boston in the Spring, and will spend a part of the Summer with Mrs. Gray's parents at their home on the North Shore.

YALE MEN AT FIERCE FIRE

NEW HAVEN, March 4.—Fire started at 11 o'clock to-day in a fashionable apartment house at No. 149 Wall street, occupied by students of Yale and of the Hopkins Grammar School. The fire started in the main building, four stories and a half high.

The blaze originated in the room of I. Ouita, a wealthy Japanese student of Tokio, who lived on the first floor. He had been in bed and awoke to see his desk ablaze. It is believed a cigarette or pipe left on the desk was the cause.

Fred Moseley, a son of W. H. Moseley, of the English Educational Commission, saw the fire, and telephoned to the Fire Department. A chemical engine was sent to the scene and the firemen at once turned in a double alarm. The fire crept in between the partitions, and the firemen fought for an hour without making much progress.

Dense smoke nearly overcame them. About fifty students who room in the building made frantic efforts to rescue their belongings, but were driven out by fire, smoke and water. Recitations on the Yale campus were temporarily suspended.

The building was owned by the Lydia Peck estate, and the loss is estimated at $25,000.

BAR OPPOSES NEW JURY BILL

At a meeting of the Boston Bar Association in the library at the federal building to-day, a resolution offered by Arthur D. Hill to appoint a committee of five to investigate the present jury system and report on the necessity of a change was adopted.

The meeting was largely attended, the bill before the present Legislature, which radically changes the system of drawing juries that, with few alterations, reads as it did nearly a hundred years ago, exciting much interest.

The bill in effect vests the power in the chief justice of the Supreme Court of appointing an election committee of one, to serve for eight years, at an annual salary of $8,000, whose duty it will be to examine into the eligibility of citizens to become members of juries to examine the records of the criminal courts and the voting lists to ascertain this.

At a previous meeting of the association a committee to report on this proposed bill, headed by Thomas W. Proctor, was appointed. Mr. Proctor, for this committee, to-day reported against the measure. His report was accepted with almost unanimous approval.

BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL IN MEDFORD

The property is situated opposite the West Medford station, on High, Warren, Irving and Madison streets and Playstead and Usher roads, having a frontage of about 700 feet on High street, 800 feet on Playstead road, 150 feet frontage on Warren street and 300 feet frontage on Usher road. The electric railway passes by the entire frontage.

The total assessment is $119,650. The price and terms of sale are private. The purchaser is Charles F. Hayward.

260,000 JAPANESE ISOLATE RUSSIAN LEFT

OYAMA'S LEGIONS MARCHING ON MUKDEN. CRUSHING DISASTER INEVITABLE.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 4.—General Kuropatkin, in command of the Russian forces in Manchuria sends this report:

"Two hundred and sixty thousand Japanese have broken through my left wing, which is cut off from the main army."

The same telegram gives another dispatch from Kuropatkin as follows:

"The Japanese are marching on Mukden, and my position is extremely dangerous."

Officials in St. Petersburg admit that Kuropatkin has sustained a crushing defeat, but the extent of the disaster is not accurately known.

General Kuropatkin also reports that the Russians have been compelled to evacuate Jachtoolin. The Japanese, he adds, have sustained enormous losses as the result of the fighting on the left flank.

An unofficial telegram states that the Japanese have made six successive attempts to storm the Russian central position. Each time they advanced to within 200 yards of the Russian position, but were repelled with great losses.

Vladivostok reports to St. Petersburg:

A Vladivostok dispatch says: Two at Shengudshin, northward of Korea, to which place they were conveyed by steamers and war ships. A flotilla of torpedo boats covered the landing.

Fearing the worst in Manchuria, the Czar has called a council of war for to-day. General Dragomiroff, Grand Duke Vladimir and Grand Duke Nicolai Nicolaievitch will be present at the conference which has as its purpose the strengthening of the Russian force under Kuropatkin, or the taking of some radical step which may presage the end of the war.

The fear for the safety of Kuropatkin's force is reflected widely in the press.

General Blerjevia reports from Mukden that a force of Japanese marching from the Liao River toward Siumintin encountered a Russian force seventeen versts west of Mukden. A determined fight ensued, the result of which is not known.

A body of Japanese later occupied Siumintin, but whether it was the same force which encountered the Russians or another force has not developed.

TOKIO, March 4.—Annihilation or capture of Kuropatkin's entire army of nearly half a million men is impending, according to reports from the Japanese Generals made to Tokio. In his bearing in movement on the Japanese left, General Oku has just taken nine miles of the Russian position on the right bank of the Hun River.

Indirectly Tokio has heard that a large force of Japanese has forced a way through the Russian left, cutting it off from Kuropatkin's force in Mukden. It is believed to be Oyama's purpose to surround the separate bodies of troops and force them to surrender.

Kuroki reports that a large body of his men succeeded in taking the first line of the Russian trenches directly west of Wltosan, now held by the Japanese. The Russians are now making a fierce resistance in the second line of trenches, but gradually the Japanese are going forward.

Desperate fighting continues along the 100-mile battle line to-day, with Kuropatkin gradually retreating in an effort to reach Ta Pass. So rapidly are the Japanese wings closing in on his army, however, that it seems impossible for the retreat to become successful, as it now seems only a question of hours before the Russian force is surrounded. The destruction of the great bridge at Tie-Ling has effectually cut off Kuropatkin's retreat in that direction, and Ta Pass is now the vital point.

Retreat May Become a Rout.

Kuropatkin realizes his desperate position, and is now having the greatest difficulty in preventing the retreat from becoming a rout. A stream of wounded is pouring through Mukden on the way to the pass.

Kuropatkin's entire line is still yielding. It seems the Japanese have won the fight for Lone Tree Hill. This is the key to Mukden, and the rush through the centre may place the Japanese line nearer than eleven miles from Mukden, this being the distance reported yesterday.

The following report has been received from the field headquarters of the Manchurian armies:

"The enemy in front of our forces in the direction of Singuching appears to be gradually receiving reinforcements.

"Our Benishu force has captured the enemy's position in the eastern heights of Gauto Pass and at Changkou, which is two miles east of Tungkou Mountain.

"In the direction of the Shakhe River the enemy in front of our forces made a small night attack, which we repulsed.

"The enemy on the right bank of the Hun River made a counter attack on Chenchichpao and its western districts toward the river, but the attack was entirely repulsed.

"We have driven the enemy from Chintao and Sugangtai."

The British steamer Easby Abbey, from Cardiff for Vladivostok, was seized by the Japanese guardships on February 27.

The Swedish steamer Vegga, of 2,562 tons gross, from Barry, December 10, for Hongkong was seized by a Japanese warship March 3. The place where she was captured is withheld.

CZAR GRANTS THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE AN ELECTIVE BODY

ST. PETERSBURG, March 4.—The Czar has so far bent to the public will that he has granted to elected representatives of the people an opportunity to express their views on the preparation of the laws of the empire.

The rescript containing the decree was signed by the Czar at the Alexandra Palace at Tsarkoe-Selo, with the Empress by his side and surrounded by ministers and several members of the court.

The decree involves no change in the regime of the autocracy, for the present, at least. It means neither a constitutional nor a national assembly, but, at the same time, it recognizes the principle of the right of the people to be heard in regard to the laws under which they must live.

The main features of the rescript as signed by the Czar are as follows:

"My desire is to attain the fulfilment of my intentions for the welfare of my people by means of the co-operation of the government with experienced forces of the community.

"I am resolved to convene the worthiest men, possessing the confidence of the people and elected by them, to participate in the elaboration and consideration of executive measures.

"Russian rulers in their wisdom instituted reforms in accordance with their mature requirements, but only in logical sequence, at the same time considering the continuation of firm historical ties with the past as a pledge for the durability and stability of the present.

"In undertaking these reforms I am convinced that local needs and experience of life, well weighted and sincere speech of those elected will insure fruitfulness to legislate for the real benefit of the people.

"I foresee all the complexity and difficulty presented in the elaboration of this reform, while preserving absolutely the immutability of the fundamental laws of the empire.

"May God bless this good beginning. May God help you successfully to secure the welfare of the people confided to me by God."

3 NEW IROQUOIS INDICTMENTS

CHICAGO, March 4.—The Cook County grand jury to-day reindicted Will J. Davis, manager of the Iroquois Theatre; George Williams, building commissioner, and William Lawton, deputy building commissioner. No bills were returned against Klaw and Erlanger, part owners of the theatre; Harry J. Powers, managing owner; J. E. Cummings, stage carpenter; Thomas A. Noonan, business manager, and Harry F. Allers, the stage fireman.

The indictments previously returned against Davis and others were quashed by Judge Kersten on technical inequalities and irregularities. Involuntary manslaughter is charged against Davis. Misfeasance and neglect of duty, thereby contributing involuntary manslaughter, is alleged against Williams and Lawton.

The best account of the inauguration of the President and the best pictures of the great event will be published in to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

STRIKE STILL ON AT QUINCY

Special to the Boston American.

QUINCY, March 4.—After a conference of four hours to-day the committees from the striking granite cutters and the Manufacturers' Association adjourned at 2 o'clock without effecting any agreement. Hopes that the strike would be settled and the men would return to work Monday are dashed. The strikers hold out for their demand for a flat wage scale of $3 per day for all union men, without discrimination regarding experience.

The conference will be resumed Monday, in hopes that the strikers or the manufacturers can be induced to yield enough to establish a basis of compromise.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The appointments of George H. Morgan as Postmaster at Newton Centre, Mass., and F. D. Dunbar at Canton, Mass., have been confirmed by the Senate.

$5,000 EXPRESS THEFT IN BOSTON POLICE THINK

Walpole Authorities Believe Money Was Taken from Package Before Sending.

CRIME A DEEP MYSTERY

Special to the Boston American.

WALPOLE, March 4.—The police now believe that the stolen express package containing $5,000 in bills and silver, sent from the National Union Bank of Boston to F. W. Bird & Son here, was taken from the Boston office of the Earle & Prew Express Company sometime Thursday night before it reached the 7:28 a. m. train for Walpole Friday morning.

Oliver J. Goodspeed, East Walpole station agent, and also express agent for the Earle & Prew Company, who took the package from the express messenger on the train and delivered it to Bird & Son, says that there was a difference in the style of package which he received Friday morning and the one which usually came out.

Goodspeed delivered the package to Bird & Company, however, and the cashier at the office immediately discovered the robbery.

Every week the firm receives from Boston the money to pay off the hands at the mill. The package received this week had every appearance of being all right, but when opened was found to contain a box different from that usually sent, with a quantity of old metal substituted for the money.

The package ordinarily passes through several hands after leaving the bank, which makes it difficult to fix the responsibility for the loss.

The employes of the Bird mill, about 360 people, were late in receiving their pay, but as rumors of the loss had leaked out there was no dissatisfaction expressed.

The utmost reticence is maintained by all concerned in the affair, but it is probable that to-day it will be placed in the hands of the police.

TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF ROBERT EMMET

Various Irish Organizations Will Do Honor to Ireland's Martyr.

PUBLIC MEETING MONDAY

Preparations have been made by the local Irish societies for the celebration of Robert Emmet's birthday. With addresses on the life and career of the Irish patriot, national songs and stories, the birth of Emmet will be commemorated at the headquarters of the various organizations.

One of the largest meetings will be held to-morrow evening at the Majestic Theatre under the auspices of the Clan-na-Gael. The meeting will be open to the public. Men prominent in the Irish movement will address the gathering, and in the intermissions an elaborate programme of music and recitations will be rendered.

Prominent among the members of the committees in charge of the affairs are Patrick A. Foley, of the Clan-na-Gael; President Matthew Cummings, of the A. O. H., and John J. Teevens, of the United Irish League.

The United Irish League will hold another meeting on Monday night at the American House. The arrangements for this meeting have been in charge of the Boston Central Council and the Boston Central Branch.

The meeting will be open to the public and all wishing to do honor to the memory of Robert Emmet will be made welcome. An address on the life of Emmet will be delivered by M. J. Jordan. The musical part of the program will be delivered by Joseph Judge, James J. Flynn, Dr. P. J. Timmins, Miss Mary E. Owen and Miss Sarah Smith.

"Oh, Breathe Not His Name" will be sung by Mr. Judge and a quartet, and Flynn will sing "When He Adores Thee."

GRAND JURY INDICT HOCH FOR MURDER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Johann Hoch, the much-married man, has been indicted for murder. The State expects to send him to the gallows—the same fate that befell the notorious H. H. Holmes, at whose feet it is claimed Hoch learned his diabolical trade.

After considering the facts in the case the Grand Jury returned a true bill against Hoch, and he will now have to stand trial for the alleged murder of Mrs. Marie Welcker-Hoch, the next to his last wife.

Besides the murder charge that now stands against him, the great alleged modern Bluebeard is a self-confessed bigamist. Hoch, the police declare, married between thirty and forty women. Some of them died mysteriously and suddenly. Others he deserted. The authorities are now going over the record of the man to ascertain whether other charges of murder may be laid against the man.

Wed Dead Wife's Sister.

Two days after the death of the woman for the murder of whom Hoch stands indicted he married her sister. Then he deserted the sister, taking, she claims, $750 of her money.

The sister—the present Mrs. Hoch—complained to the police and they got on the trail of the man. The further they went the more astonished they became. They suspected that he was a wholesale marrying man as well as murderer. Hoch was identified as the janitor of the "Holmes Castle," in this city, where he carried out his murderous designs.

The body of the late Mrs. Hoch was exhumed. The chemists found arsenic in the stomach, and the coroner's jury found that Hoch administered it. He was held without bail for the Grand Jury, which has now indicted him.

Hoch was run to earth by the detectives in New York. After being taken to Chicago Mrs. Emelie Fischer-Hoch, his latest wife, called on him and asked for her money.

Realizes Predicament.

"Now, my dear," said Hoch, "don't get excited. You will get all your money back and more. But you must do the right thing. All of these stories about me are false. You leave me alone and you will come out all right. Wait, and we will talk this thing over later."

Until lately Hoch has assumed a jaunty air, and has been inclined to look upon the charges that have been made against him rather lightly or with assumed lightness. Now, however, he has begun to realize that he is in a very serious predicament, although he stoutly maintains that he did not murder his next-to-last wife or any others of them.

HEROIC WOMAN FOUGHT FIRE TO SAVE BROTHERS

Mrs. Anglin Succeeded After Awful Struggle in Getting Two Men Out.

ESCAPED THINLY CLAD

Rushing through the flames and smoke in a room on the top floor of No. 17 Parkman street, Mrs. Patrick J. Anglin, at the risk of her own life, early to-day, saved the lives of her two brothers, James W. and Charles Mullen, who were asleep in an adjoining room.

But for her prompt and fearless action the two young men probably would have been burned to death. She reached the sleeping men just as the flames were breaking into their room, and they were obliged to make their escape in their nightclothes. Having brought her brothers in safety to the street, Mrs. Anglin, overcome by the smoke, collapsed, but was quickly revived.

The fire is supposed to have been started by mice and matches. Mrs. Anglin was preparing breakfast when she noticed the smoke pouring down from the floor above where her brothers were still sleeping. Rushing up stairs she saw the blaze in the front room. The place was filled with smoke, but she had to pass through it to reach the two young men. Choking with the smoke she could not cry out. Groping her way to the bedroom, she roused the sleepers, and the three dashed back through the front room to safety.

An alarm had meantime been sent in and the other tenant in the house, John Gallagher, who occupied the first floor with his wife and four children, had reached the street. The damage amounted to about $500.

The Bath girl who amazed the society of her home city by being married on the stage tells why she did so for to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Almost a Million Men in One Fight

And When the Battle Is Over and the Dead Are Counted, No Right Solution of Cause Will Be Decided

The greatest battle in the history of the world in numbers of men engaged is being fought.

Kuropatkin confronts Oyama's army of 380,000 men with 400,000 soldiers.

Each has sought to turn the other's flank, and now Oyama seems to be operating on the offensive.

This is the greatest collision of fighting men in one battle line.

In the beginning of '64 Grant struck Lee with 120,000 men. The total Federal army was over half a million, the Confederates were half that number, but the forces were cut up into half a dozen armies.

It looks as if Japan has brought up every available man. Neither army has a great reserve, but the forces engaged are so colossal that neither side will be put to flight.

It will take a campaign of several weeks to decide who is to be decisively beaten.

More Russians and Japanese are in cannon shot of one another than there are men of voting age in Greater New York. The two armies are greater in numbers than any city in the United States except New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

They are spending more money than is necessary to run the entire government of the United States.

They are consuming uselessly the labor of two great nations.

But they will fight on and vindicate nothing but the folly of war, and the other Powers will not make a friendly offer that would stop the war, because it might be accepted as an act of impertinence.

Haeckel's Theory of Divorce at Will

A Puzzled Father Finds His Son Reading the German Philosopher's Views and Is Amazed

A "PUZZLED FATHER," whom, from the tenor of his letter, we take to be a good father, is disturbed when he finds that one of his son's textbooks has a statement favoring divorce, denouncing marriage as a sacrament and holding it to be a mere contract, voidable when it becomes irksome. And what also troubles him is that the author of these views is a leader of thought in Germany to-day. The letter follows:

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I found a book yesterday on my son's reading table, entitled "The Wonders of Life." My son, who is a student at a New York college, said that the author of the book—Ernst Haeckel—was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, thinkers and leaders of thought in Germany to-day.

One of the chapters of the book, labelled "Morality," attracted my attention, and on scanning the pages I found this passage:

> "Reason demands the liberation of marriage from ecclesiastical pressure. It demands that matrimony be grounded on mutual love, esteem and devotion, and that it, at the same time, be counted a social contract, and be protected as civil marriage by proper legislation. But when the contracting parties find (as so often happens) that they have mistaken each other's character, and that they do not suit each other, they should be free to dissolve the bargain. The pressure which comes of marriage being regarded as a sacrament, and which prevents the dissolution of unhappy marriages, IS MERELY A SOURCE OF VICE AND CRIME."

In amazement I turned to the title page of the book, and found there the imprint of a reputable New York publisher, and to complete my amazement my son told me that this book of Haeckel's, and others that he has written, are regarded as safe and exact textbooks for the youths of America.

Will you tell me who is right—the preachers who declare that divorce is the ruination of society or the teachers who insist that it is its safeguard?

Truly yours,

Boston, February 22. A PUZZLED FATHER.

Haeckel is a great thinker. He is a profound scholar. He has a great mind.

But in questions of morals and marriage "Puzzled Father's" views are just as good as Haeckel's.

We are too prone to measure men's views by the reputation of the author rather than by the intrinsic merit of the views themselves. That Haeckel says there should be free divorce does not add one argument to the merit of free divorce.

Hetty Green the other day said a marriage contract is a promise, and she believes in keeping promises.

This business woman's views on marriage are entitled to as much respect as the theory of the profound philosopher.

What manner of man says a thing should never be considered. The only thing worth attention is the thing said. The difference between the world's smartest man and the world's most ignorant man is very little, and in following the teachings of any man it is well to keep this in mind.

The majority of the American people do not agree with Haeckel in his divorce theory, and in his own country we believe his theory of divorce at will is not generally accepted.

WHAT DO OUR READERS THINK OF HAECKEL'S VIEWS ON MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE?

Little Sermons

By Elbert Hubbard

THE millennium will never come until governments cease from governing and the meddler is at rest.

In art we ask for the widest, freest and fullest liberty for individuality—that's all.

For the good old ladies who prick the Bible for a message, I have profound sympathy; the sacred page fits man's every mood, and this is why it is immortal.

All sublime art is symbolic. What is the message the great violinist brings you? Ah, you cannot impart it! Each must hear it for himself. The note that is "clear" to all is not great art.

Man cannot advance and leave woman behind.

The Jiner instinct in a man is a manifestation of weakness, not strength. It is a clutch to get something for nothing, a grab at good which you have not earned.

I'm not so sure what the unpardonable sin is, but I believe it is the disposition to not pay small bills.

Greatness and good cheer—these come before all questions of morals.

If I were a woman I would cultivate the fine art of listening. No woman can talk as interestingly as she can look.

It is a good policy to leave a few things unsaid.

The books written behind prison bars by men in forced exile and by those who paid the penalty of honest expression with death largely inspire earth's highest thoughts; the world's saviors are often society's outcasts.

Show the marbles that fill your niches and the canvases that glorify your walls to those who seldom see such sights. Give your education to those who need it, your culture to those who have less, and you double your treasure by giving it away.

Listen closely and you will detect the minor note in the voice of every man of decided worth.

I do not believe in governing by force, or threat, or any other form of coercion. I would not condemn any one. I would not arouse in the heart of any of God's creatures a thought of fear, or discord, or hate, or revenge. I will influence men, if I can, but it shall be only by aiding them to think for themselves; and so, mayhap, they, of their own accord, will choose the better part—the ways that lead to life and light.

Soliloquies of the Great

By Ambrose Bierce

KING EDWARD VII.:

WAR is a wicked thing! 'Tis sad to think
That men shed blood who could as well shed ink.
'Twere better far if Kruger, for example
(Of men misguided he's a perfect sample),
Had written down his grievances in full,
Even if to do so he had had to pull
The quills from every goose-wing in the lands
On which we'd laid our consecrating hands.
Japan and Russia, similarly sinful,
Each other's gore are spilling by the skinful.
Blessed are peacemakers!—I'll stop the strife
By hatching plots against the throne and life
Of Nephew Nicholas. With gold well spent
I'll foster—well, "industrial discontent."
So my pacific spirit I'll exhibit
And, incidentally, make sure of Thibet.

THE MIKADO:

HOW inconsiderate of the Russian folk
To try to break their honorable yoke!
Better to bear it, howsoe'er it vex,
Until I lift it from their headless necks.
I'll visit that St. Petersburg some day,
And Kuropatkin cannot block my way.
Why should I not? 'Tis courtesy to go—
The Russians mostly visit Tokio.
Banzai Nippon!—these isles are small and sterile;
Make room to westward for this Yellow Peril!

THE CZAR:

MY people come to me and make their moan:
"We starve, Your Majesty—give us a stone."
That's flat rebellion—how the devil dare
They starve right in my capital? Their prayer
For something in their bellies I will meet
With that which I'll not trouble them to eat.
They ask for greater freedom. No, indeed—
What happened to my ancestor who freed
The serfs? A grateful subject duly flung
Something that spoke to him without a tongue.
So he was sacrificed for Freedom's sake
And gathered to his fathers with a rake.
A little earlier, beyond the sea,
A President had set the negroes free—
A homely man, great-spirited, high-hearted,
He, too, when the assassin bade, departed.
Contemporary with these men of will,
Another held dominion in Brazil.
He was a liberator, too. His part
In life was exile and a broken heart.
Dethroned and banished to an alien shore,
He breathed his last and Virtue was no more.
I from Autocracy my people free?
Ah, would to Heaven they could deliver me!

IS THE TRADE SCHOOL A MENACE?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

At a time when skill seems a struggling factor in our industries, a few commercial clubs are urgent that our poor young men should receive the aid of the trade school to better enable them to fill positions in the workshops. But commercial club aid, however promising it may seem to the toiling people, should always be taken with a grain of suspicion.

The talk about the requirement of skill among superintendents and factory managers is absolutely repugnant. The skilful manager, in most cases, has long been supplanted by the athlete, with better results, in the opinion of the manufacturer.

The trade school would be a menace to the trade union, and the men who advocate it are doubtful defenders of the loyal workers. CHARLES F. PALMER.

DOES CULTURE MEAN VIRTUE?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN.

I know that among your contributors there are many intelligent and thinking people who might feel inclined to express their views upon the questions I am going to submit to their consideration.

What relation has culture to virtue? I refer to the term culture in its usual accepted meaning. What is its meaning, and how does it affect the individual? An eminent divine recently made this remark: "Culture is not virtue."

I do not wish to limit the term to the narrow limits of manners. This would not imply all that I understand to be true culture, i. e., educational intelligence and interested appreciation of all the varied conditions of life and their amelioration in the spirit of love and charity. R. K. LANE.
